There has been a significant increase in the number of incidents between the Oklahoma City Police Department and the city’s Native American population. The number of incidents has increased from 1960 to 1970, with the increase being particularly noticeable in the last five years. The Oklahoma City Police Department has been criticized for its handling of these incidents, with some Native Americans claiming that they are treated unfairly. The department, however, denies these allegations and states that its policy is to treat all individuals with respect, regardless of ethnicity.

The PEOPLE'S Voice

Apathy

As a nation, we've become complacent. Instead of actively seeking solutions to our problems, we've allowed politicians to take the lead. We need to be more involved in our political process, not just voting in elections but also being informed and taking action. Our voices need to be heard, and we must demand accountability from our leaders. We cannot continue to accept mediocrity; we must strive for excellence in every aspect of our lives and society.

William F. Buckley, Jr.
Abolish, Abolish

President Nixon must take decisive action against those responsible for the Vietnam War. The continuation of this conflict is a monumental injustice. We must work to end this war and bring our troops home. The Vietnam War is a failed policy, and we must hold those responsible accountable for the lives lost and the suffering caused. As citizens, we must demand a more just and peaceful world.

Hard To Give Money Away Right

As a country, we've become more stingy with our resources, especially when it comes to helping others. We must be more generous and willing to share our wealth, especially in times of need. We must prioritize the well-being of others, not just our own self-interest. Let us be more compassionate and give without hesitation.

The Candidates: Where They Stand On Issues

Nixon

McGovern

Humphrey

Wallace

The Economy

Both Nixon and McGovern, for example, favor a balanced federal budget, but McGovern would go further by taking steps to reduce the national debt, which Nixon believes is already at a manageable level. Humphrey supports increased federal spending on education and welfare, while Wallace advocates for lower taxes and less government intervention in the economy.

The War

Nixon and Humphrey both favor a continued search for peace in Vietnam, with Humphrey arguing for a more aggressive approach. McGovern and Wallace, on the other hand, are more critical of the war and call for its immediate withdrawal.

War-Related Issues

All candidates agree on the need for increased military preparedness, but there are differences in how they propose to finance it. Nixon and Humphrey favor increased federal spending on defense, while McGovern and Wallace argue for cuts in other areas to finance military spending.

Law And Order

Nixon and Humphrey both support increased law enforcement and tougher penalties for crimes. McGovern and Wallace, however, call for a more humane approach, emphasizing rehabilitation and parole programs.

Busing

Nixon and Humphrey favor the use of busing to achieve racial balance in schools. McGovern and Wallace are more skeptical of busing, arguing it can lead to the decline of neighborhood schools.

Abortion And Population Control

All candidates agree that abortion should be legal, but there are differences in how they propose to regulate it. Nixon and Humphrey support strict regulations, while McGovern and Wallace favor more liberal policies.

Ecology

Nixon and Humphrey both favor increased conservation efforts, but Nixon is more focused on the energy crisis. McGovern and Wallace are more concerned with the environment and propose stricter regulations on pollution and conservation programs.
BOMBING POLICY WON'T END WAR

This article concludes an excerpt from the former Secretary of Defense under the former Foreign Affairs Committee.

By CLARK CAMPBELL

Western World Correspondent

We are hearing that President Nixon's decision to increase the bombing in Vietnam is gaining support from within his cabinet. This is not surprising, given that the bombing campaign is seen as a way to weaken the North Vietnamese regime and force them to negotiate a settlement.

Of course, it is not a new strategy, and there are some who argue that the United States has been using bombing as a tool for over a century. In fact, the U.S. has used bombing extensively in wars, such as the Korean War and the Vietnam War.

The new strategy includes the use of precision-guided munitions, which are said to be more accurate and less likely to cause civilian casualties. The U.S. military has also been using drone strikes, which are said to be more effective in targeting enemy fighters.

However, there are concerns about the ethics of using bombing as a tool for warfare. Some argue that it is a form of violence that is inherently immoral, and that it can lead to a cycle of violence that is difficult to break.

There are also concerns about the impact of bombing on the civilian population. Many civilians are killed or injured in bombings, and the destruction of homes and infrastructure can be devastating.

The U.S. military has also been criticized for the use of bombing in other conflicts, such as the Iran-Iraq War and the war in Afghanistan.

In conclusion, while the use of bombing as a tool for warfare is not new, there are significant concerns about its ethics and impact on civilians. It is important to consider these issues before deciding to increase the bombing in Vietnam or any other conflict.
