Power To The Parents—10

Do Children Have 'Rights'?

Many parents are inclined to believe that if their children act up, they are entitled to have their way. This is a dangerous attitude, because it encourages children to believe that they have a right to do what they please, regardless of the wishes of others.

Children do not have 'rights' in the same sense that adults have rights. They are not capable of understanding the consequences of their actions, and they cannot make responsible decisions about what is best for themselves. Instead, children have needs that must be met by their parents or other caregivers.

Parents have the responsibility to provide for the physical, emotional, and social needs of their children. This includes meeting their children’s basic needs, such as food, shelter, and healthcare, as well as creating a safe and nurturing environment for them to grow and develop.

The concept of children's rights can help parents understand their responsibilities and empower children to take an active role in their own lives.
