Citizens for Hope have laid a moving ceremony of more than 24,000 names of those who lost their lives in the war. The names were presented to the Korean War Memorial at the presidential Fajardo House.

The Fajardo War Memorial is a place where visitors can pay tribute to veterans. It was the site where many of the deceased returned to the nation during the Korean War. Their names are inscribed on the monument, which is a symbol of their sacrifice.

Many of the visitors to the memorial are family members of those who served in the war. They come from all over the world to pay their respects and honor the sacrifices made.
