Bellmon Says McGovern Could Pull Surprise

By HOMAS DAVIS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Thirty-six-year-old George McGovern, a former assistant to President Johnson, said today that he was now considering the possibility of running for the Democratic presidential nomination. He added that if he decided to run, he would move to Washington and begin organizing a campaign for the primary elections.

McGovern said he was considering running because he believed that the Democratic party was in need of a new leader. He said that he had been impressed by the way that Johnson had handled the war in Vietnam, and he wanted to continue the same approach.

McGovern also said that he believed that the Democratic party needed to reach out to younger voters. He said that he would be able to do this because of his own experience as a younger voter.
