Unfortunately, The Kids Are Still There

by Jim Murray
L.A. Times Service

"The kids are still there, but the old team is gone."

The thought of what might have been for the Dodgers is tempered with an appreciation for what they are now.

The Dodgers, once the dominant force in baseball, now face a future with new owners and a new identity. The team's history and legacy are still evident, but the players and coaches are different.

There are stillORG's with the kids, and the team is still, but the atmosphere has changed. The old team is gone, but the kids are still there, and it's a bittersweet reminder of what once was.

Orioles Trip Royals, 7-6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) -- Vida Blue, playing his first game after more than two years away from the majors, struck out 12 batters and showed no signs of rust as he won his 17th victory of the season.

Blue, who had been out of baseball for two years because of a knee injury, allowed four hits and two runs in seven innings but didn't walk a batter.

The left-hander, who has been a star pitcher for the Oakland Athletics in the past, said he was pleased with his performance.

"I felt good," he said. "I think I can do it again."
