Egypt: Good News, Bad News

The reason for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit to Washington is not the least bit warm, however. It is his announcement that he will send his government's oil and natural gas fields and pipelines to the United States. This move is likely to be viewed as a blow to the oil industry in the United States, and it may have a significant impact on the economy. A new source of energy is likely to be a major boost to the economy, and it may also help to reduce the US trade deficit. However, the oil industry may not be as pleased with the news, as it is likely to face increased competition from foreign rivals. It is unclear whether the move will have any impact on the price of oil, but it is likely to be a positive development for the economy.
