Students Taken Home After Hall Fight

An unannounced number of students were taken home from the school after a physical altercation in a residence hall on Wednesday. The incident occurred on the third floor of the hall, where several students were reportedly involved in a fight. The school administration was reportedly unaware of the altercation until it was brought to their attention.

The school has not released any further details about the incident, and the investigation is ongoing. Students were reportedly taken home for their safety and well-being.

Demons Violations Charged

WASHINGTON — The United States Department of Justice announced on Wednesday that it had charged a group of students from the University of California, Berkeley, with violating federal law. The charges, which include harassment and retaliation, stem from an investigation into the alleged targeting of members of a self-identified student group.

The investigation was launched after complaints were made by members of the targeted group, who alleged that they were being subjected to a pattern of harassment and retaliation.

The charges were announced by United States Attorney for the Northern District of California, satellite. No further details were provided.

Arbitrator Lands Solid Blow For Freedom Of Press

by JACK COCHRAN

WASHINGTON — An arbitrator has upheld a free expression claim by a newspaper publisher who was denied the right to publish a story critical of a local government agency. The arbitrator ruled that the publisher had a right to print the story, despite the public agency's objection. The decision overturned a previous ruling by the local court and cleared the way for the newspaper to publish the story. The arbitrator's decision is seen as a significant victory for freedom of the press.

Teachers Have Dress Code, Too

What's Good For Goose...

A recent study examining the effects of dressing code policies on student performance found that schools with strict dress codes have lower rates of truancy and disciplinary issues. The study, conducted by researchers at the University of California, found that students in schools with dress codes were less likely to skip school and more likely to engage in positive behavior. The findings suggest that dress codes can have a positive impact on student academic performance.

Professional Theatre Jobs
Limited, Students Warned

Ozone Harms Tomato Plants

by TIM FENWICK

News Reports and government tests have been indicating that the nation's tomato plants are being damaged by the ozone that is present in the atmosphere.

The problem is that the plants are unable to produce the amounts of vitamins and other nutrients that they need to grow properly. The ozone also increases the amount of water the plants need, which can lead to overwatering and root rot.

What Can Be More Natural Than Cooking Over Coals?

Marinated Chuck Steak Adds Flavor To Barbecue Grill

A little olive oil, a little vinegar, a little wine, and a little spice make a good marinade for meat. Here's a recipe to try:

1. Place the steak in a shallow pan.
2. Mix together:
   - 1/4 cup olive oil
   - 1/4 cup red wine vinegar
   - 1/4 cup red wine
   - 1/4 cup soy sauce
   - 2 cloves garlic, minced
   - 1 tablespoon minced fresh rosemary
   - 1 teaspoon salt
   - 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
3. Pour the mixture over the steak and let it marinate for at least 30 minutes.
4. Grill the steak over medium-high heat for about 8-10 minutes on each side, or until it's cooked to your liking.

Ozone Harms Tomato Plants

by Tom Scharfman

As American farmers and gardeners prepare for another tomato season, the threat of ozone damage to plants becomes more pressing. High levels of ozone, which is produced by automobile exhaust, can harm tomato plants, reducing their yield and quality.

Tomato plants are sensitive to ozone levels, and high concentrations can cause leaf damage and yellowing. The risk is greatest during hot, sunny days, when ozone levels are highest.

To protect your tomato plants from ozone damage, consider the following tips:

1. Watering: Watering your plants regularly can help reduce the effects of ozone. A good rule of thumb is to water your plants deeply and infrequently rather than shallowly and frequently.

2. Mulching: Mulching around the base of your tomato plants can help reduce evaporation and reduce the need for watering, thus protecting the plants from ozone damage.

3. Row Covers: Row covers can help reduce the amount of ozone that reaches your plants. They can also help control pests and diseases.

4. Timing: Avoid planting tomatoes during periods of high ozone levels. If you must plant during such periods, consider using shade cloth or row covers to protect your plants.

5. Rotation: Rotate your tomato plants among different crops each year to prevent the build-up of soilborne diseases that can be spread by tomato plant virus.

By taking these steps, you can help protect your tomato plants from ozone damage and ensure a successful tomato season.

Defleaing Big Task

When you think about flea control for cats or dogs, the big task is often the task of getting rid of those pesky pests. Fleas can be a real nuisance, and getting rid of them can be a big job.

To deflea a cat or dog, you need to follow a few basic steps:

1. Vacuum: Start by vacuuming the affected area, paying special attention to areas where fleas might be hiding, such as in corners, under furniture, and on carpets.

2. Treat: Apply a flea treatment to your pet, following the instructions on the product. Be sure to treat both your pet and your home to get rid of fleas and their eggs.

3. Wash: Wash your pet's bedding, as well as any other items that your pet has been using, to remove any fleas or their eggs.

4. Repeat: Repeat the process every two weeks until no more fleas are found.

By following these steps, you can help deflea your pet and keep them free of those pesky pests.

Meet the hottest team in town...

TOM WRIGHT is executive sports editor and one of the leading writers in the Midwest. Tom is equally proficient at reporting on college football games, the national finals rodeo and other leading attractions in sports-obsessed Oklahoma.

DOYLE MAY is sports editor and directs the Journal's sports staff, which prides itself on covering all sport events of local or national interest. May is one of the nation's leading baseball writers and serves as vice-president of the American Association Baseball Writers chapter. He also covers Big Eight football and basketball games.

AL ESCHBACH's knowledge of the state high school scene makes his byline a byword with readers of the Journal. He specializes in football and wrestling, and also keeps state fans abreast of Oklahoma's powerful collegiate mat teams.

CHRIS RUSCHA is the Journal's expert on hockey. Chris knows both the players and coaches as he spends much of his time at practice sessions to learn more about one of Oklahoma City's more popular sports. Chris also specializes in covering the state college football scene.

JOHN MARTIN supplies the Journal with expertly written high school basketball news due to the fact he is a coach in the Midwest City school system. John's byline is one of authority as his cage ratings are among the most accurate in the state.

JAMES TIDWELL, an Oklahoma Baptist University graduate, who is in charge of the Journal's sports desk is the man behind the scenes. He's the man who weights the news, decides what stories should receive top billing and puts it all together to make up our exciting sports pages.

Arbitrator Lands Solid Blow For Freedom Of Press

By SHERI CASEY

SHERI CASEY  The United States Supreme Court has ruled that a state-appointed arbitrator is not a "person" for purposes of the Freedom of the Press Act.

The decision, in the case of American News Co. v. State of North Dakota, is a major victory for the press and a defeat for the state of North Dakota, which had sought to restrict the press's ability to obtain information about the arbitrator's deliberations.

With the victory of North Carolina, the newspaper's appeal in the case was heard before the Supreme Court.

The case was about the Freedom of the Press Act, which was passed by Congress in 1931 to protect the freedom of the press from government interference.

The Supreme Court ruled that the arbitrator was not a "person" under the Act, and therefore was not entitled to the protection of the Act.

The decision opens the way for the press to obtain information about the arbitrator's deliberations.
