Costumes Give Show 'Excitement'

By TAMMY MARION

New costumes, designed and created by the students of the Oklahoma City University Dance Department, were the highlight of the school's annual skating show last weekend. The costumes were not only visually stunning, but they also added a new dimension to the skaters' movements, enhancing the overall performance. The skaters, dressed in a variety of styles and colors, performed a range of routines, from classical ballet to modern dance, all set to a live orchestra. The audience was captivated by the show's excitement, which was further accentuated by the costumes' vibrant designs and the skaters' fluid movements.

Classes Underway To Teach Docs About City Zoo

Dr. Frank Smith, Director of the Oklahoma City Zoo, has begun teaching a new course at the University of Oklahoma that focuses on the biology and management of exotic animals. The course, titled "Zoology of Exotic Species," is designed to prepare doctors who wish to work in zoological gardens or wildlife sanctuaries. Students in the course study the anatomy, physiology, and behavior of various species of animals, including big cats, primates, and reptiles. Dr. Smith, who has worked at the zoo for over 20 years, is a leading expert in the field of exotic animal care.

Small Sleeves Irk Buyer

DEAR POLLY - I must tell you that I am very dissatisfied with the service I received from your department store. I purchased a dress with small sleeves, and when I tried it on, I found that the sleeves were too tight. I have never had a problem with the fit of my clothes before, and I am very disappointed with the quality of this item. I would like a refund or an exchange for a larger size.

DEAR POLLY - I was so excited to receive your latest catalog in the mail. I love the way you always have the latest styles and trends. I am particularly interested in the dress with small sleeves that you feature in your current collection. I think it would be perfect for a formal event I am attending next week. I am looking forward to seeing it in person.

Lung Cancer More Common In Polluted Cities

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) - A recent study has revealed that lung cancer is more common in polluted cities. The study, conducted by the National Cancer Institute, found that people living in areas with high levels of air pollution have a higher risk of developing lung cancer.

The report, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, analyzed data from over 100,000 participants in the National Lung Health Study. The study found that people living in areas with high levels of particulate matter had a 20% higher risk of developing lung cancer compared to those living in areas with low levels of pollution.

The study's lead author, Dr. John Smith, said, "Our findings suggest that pollution has a significant impact on lung health. We urge people living in polluted areas to take steps to reduce their exposure to these harmful substances."
