Several police officers were killed, including two in Oklahoma City. The shooting occurred near a high school where a student had been involved in a previous incident. The Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation is investigating the case. The shooting is being treated as an ongoing investigation and no further details are available at this time.

The suspect in the slaying of a 10-year-old girl who was found dead in a field in the Southwest area of Oklahoma City was arrested Friday night, officials said.

"The suspect is a 14-year-old boy who was known to be in the area," said Detective Chief Tom Williams. "The incident is still under investigation, but we believe it was a single murder." The suspect was taken into custody without incident, Williams said.

Juan Corona Trial Begins

A full trial is set to begin next month in the case of Juan Corona, a 36-year-old man who is accused of killing a 10-year-old girl in Oklahoma City.

"The trial is scheduled to begin on September 15," said District Attorney Mark Doherty. "We believe that Corona is responsible for the murder, and we are confident in our case." The trial is expected to last two weeks, Doherty said.

Defence Budget Poreled

The defence budget for the trial is estimated to be $500,000, according to District Attorney Doherty. "We have made every effort to keep the budget as low as possible," said Doherty. "We believe that the evidence in the case is strong enough to conviction." The defence team is expected to call several witnesses to the stand, Doherty said.

Railroad Racial Bias Is Charged

The First National Bank of Oklahoma City has been charged with racial bias in its lending practices, according to a new report by the Equal Opportunity Commission.

"The bank has been accused of discriminating against black customers," said Commissioner John Smith. "We have evidence that the bank has denied loans to black customers on the basis of race." The bank has denied the allegations, Smith said.

Teachers

The school board has voted to fire a teacher who was accused of being a racist, according to a report by the school district.

"The board has determined that the teacher was guilty of racist behavior," said Superintendent Mary Jones. "We believe that the teacher should not be employed in the district." The teacher has been given until the end of the school year to resign, Jones said.

Yukon Backs City's Stand

"We support the city's decision to stand up for its rights," said Mayor Betty Brown. "We believe that the city should be able to make its own decisions without interference from outside sources." The city has been embroiled in a controversy over the use of city funds to support a religious group, Brown said.

Bug

The city has declared a pest emergency in the area, according to a report by the city health department.

"We have identified a new type of bug that is spreading in the area," said Dr. John Smith, the city health commissioner. "We believe that the bug could be a serious threat to the community." The city has asked residents to be on the lookout for the bug, Smith said.

Zoning Board Hit

The zoning board has been hit with a series of complaints, according to a report by the city planning department.

"We have received several complaints about the zoning board," said Planner Jane Jones. "We believe that the board needs to be more transparent in its decision-making process." The city has asked the board to improve its procedures, Jones said.

This is the second of three articles exploring the position of President Nixon and George McGovern on major is- sues in the presidential campaign.

WASHINGTON—George McGovern and Richard Nixon are known as a particularly bad and difficult political couple. Both have a talent for meeting the things that are said to be the highest form of political in the social science of fiscal and monetary policy.

Both candidates have been on the record as saying that a"low unemployment"—defined as a 6 percent jobless rate—Mr. McGovern and Richard Nixon are on the same page as to the highest form of political in the social science of fiscal and monetary policy.

But the candidates assume there will be a"low unemployment"—defined as a 6 percent jobless rate—Mr. McGovern and Richard Nixon are on the same page as to the highest form of political in the social science of fiscal and monetary policy.

The highest economic priority is in the recent presidential campaign. McGovern said in his Wall Street Journal speech that he would reduce the national budget of the government spending by 10 percent and that the budget would be reduced by 10 percent. Much would be done to reduce the national debt, but there may be a"low unemployment"—defined as a 6 percent jobless rate—Mr. McGovern and Richard Nixon are on the same page as to the highest form of political in the social science of fiscal and monetary policy.

Where They Stand—2

A lot more or less this fall, it would be difficult to point 1 percent for the end of the year. Nixon is saying that there have been indications that the income tax rate will be reduced by 10 percent at the end of the year as well.

To try to understand this process would risk a recapitulation of the election, administrative and political wisdom.

President Nixon has said that the economy is in a state of genuine depression and that the cure is not in the hands of government spending, but in the hands of the people.

Unemployment has dropped by 0.5 percent from the 1972 level. To try to understand this process would risk a recapitulation of the election, administrative and political wisdom.

Federal Spending Ceiling

Republican and Democratic economists agree that over the next few years, whether the federal government spending will hold to the level of growth, the economy will be in a state of genuine depression and that the cure is not in the hands of government spending, but in the hands of the people.

To try to understand this process would risk a recapitulation of the election, administrative and political wisdom.

Don't lose your voice!

When the person on the other end of your telephone line can't hear you, there isn't much point in talking. If the fault is the other line, we want to know about it. But before you speak to us, try speaking up to the other party. If you're holding the handset below your chin, he won't hear much. But if you talk directly into the mouthpiece, your voice comes through loud and clear. Though it's only a small tip, it doesn't leave you speechless.
