Fire: "Silent Epidemic"

The prospect of increased fire hazards this fall is made all the more alarming by the very real danger to the health and safety of children, particularly in the rural areas of our state. The fire danger in those areas is especially high because of the many children who are left to care for themselves.

The National Association of Homeowners and Builders has issued a plea for the protection of children in areas where fires are likely to occur. They suggest that parents should provide adequate supervision and education to help children avoid fire hazards.

"We have proposed a significantly increased fire protection for children and families," said Bob Considine, president of the NAHB. "We believe that every family should have access to fire protection, whether it be a water tower, a cistern, or a sprinkler system."

The NAHB has also launched a public awareness campaign to encourage people to take steps to prevent fires and to protect themselves and their families.

Our Human Nature

The author's philosophy is that people are basically good and that they should be trusted and respected. However, people can be divided into two types: the selfish and the altruistic. The selfish person is motivated by their own self-interest, while the altruistic person is motivated by a desire to help others.
