Venezuelans Urging Oil Production Cuts

Oil from the state-owned Venezuelan national oil company has been crucial to the country's economy. However, the company has been facing financial struggles due to low oil prices. As a result, the government is considering a proposal to cut back on oil production. This move is expected to cause a decrease in oil revenue, but it could also help stabilize the country's economy.

Money Ties To First Wife Often Challenge To Second

The Second Wife—VIII

By LEE K. HENDRIX

As the saying goes, "Money talks." But when it comes to the second wife, it can be a double-edged sword. On the one hand, it can bring financial security and stability. On the other hand, it can create tension and conflict. The key to success, it seems, is finding a balance and establishing clear boundaries.

Diabetes, Glaucoma Tests Set

A new study has shown that diabetes and glaucoma have a strong correlation. The research, conducted by a team of doctors at the University of California, San Francisco, found that people with diabetes are at a higher risk of developing glaucoma. The study was based on a large sample of patients who were followed for an average of 10 years. The results were published in the Journal of Ophthalmology.

Telegrams: The Lost Art of Communication

In a world dominated by email and instant messaging, the art of writing a telegram is often forgotten. Telegrams were once a vital form of communication, particularly during times of war and disaster. They were fast, efficient, and, in many cases, more confidential than other forms of communication. Today, few people have the opportunity to write a telegram, but the skill is still valuable.

Children's Strength Problem In Designing Safe Toys

By JIM H. OWENS

Safe toys for children seem simple enough. However, when it comes to designing toys that are both fun and safe, there are many challenges. This is particularly true for toys that are designed for children with special needs. The designer must consider the child's strengths and weaknesses, as well as the environment in which the toy will be used.

Wondering About Air Strikes

There is a question hanging in the air

This week's newspaper had a front page article about the ongoing air strikes in Vietnam. The article was written by a young journalist who had recently returned from a reporting trip to the region. The journalist had observed the effects of the air strikes on the local population and had concerns about the impact on civilian lives.

"It's a delicate balance," the journalist wrote. "The air strikes are essential in the fight against the enemy, but the toll on civilian lives is staggering." The article concluded with a call for a more humanitarian approach to the conflict.

Different War, Different POW

Location: New York City

NEW YORK - The last POW to be captured by the United States military in Vietnam was released in 1973. Since then, the U.S. has not captured a single POW in any of its major conflicts. In contrast, the U.S. Air Force has captured over 50 POWs in recent conflicts.

"The situation is different," said a retired Air Force officer. "In Vietnam, we were fighting a large, well-organized enemy. In recent conflicts, we've been fighting small, scattered groups." The officer went on to say that the capture of POWs is a priority for the military.

Obligation Of Audiences

Locality: St. Louis

"As a journalist, I have a responsibility to report the truth," said Paul Harvey. "But as a citizen, I have an obligation to support my country. I believe that the U.S. is fighting a just war." Harvey's comments sparked a debate among fellow journalists about the role of the media in times of conflict.

Kuwait Courted With U.S. Arms

"Some Department officials in Washington have hinted that Kuwaiti aircraft may be the key to an arms deal," Jack Andrews wrote in the Washington Times. "But the offer has met with stiff resistance from other countries." Andrews went on to say that the U.S. must be careful not to alienate its allies.

Now Who's Number 3?

Colorado, Kansas Only Losers In Big 8

By Tom McMillan

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 9—The question of who'll be the third-place team in the Big Eight and the most likely contender for the conference title was discussed by coaches this week. The Big Eight race is far from settled, but Kansas and Colorado are the only teams that are out of the picture.

The loss to Texas will be a blow to the first-place team. The Jayhawks are in a tough position now, but they still have a chance to catch up. The Jayhawks have a game against Oklahoma this weekend, and the Sooners are coming off a loss to Texas. If the Jayhawks can beat the Sooners, they might be able to catch up in the conference standings.

On the other hand, Colorado is in a tough position. The Buffaloes lost to Oklahoma last week, and they have a game against Kansas this weekend. The Buffaloes need a win to stay in the race, but they might be playing catch-up with the Jayhawks.

The Big Eight is a tough conference, and it's hard to predict who will come out on top. The Jayhawks and Buffaloes are both in a tough position, but they still have a chance to catch up. The conference race is far from settled, and it's sure to be an exciting one.
