Poet Ezra Pound Dies

Poet Ezra Pound, whose innovations in free verse helped to inaugurate the modernist movement in literature, died today at the age of 64. Pound had been in failing health for several years, and his death was expected. He was a controversial figure, known for his involvement in fascist politics and his admiration for Mussolini.

We'll pay you $42.76 to go to meetings.

There's more money today at your local Army Reserve. Because we've received a pay raise.

For example, a private with over four months service used to earn $19.16 for four 4-hour meetings a month. Now a private earns $42.76 for the same meetings. It's always paid to go to meetings.

The Army Reserve. It pays to go to meetings.
Ford Eyes Vapor Engine

A new vapor engine was the subject of a recent study conducted by engineers at Ford Motor Company. The engine, which operates on a principle similar to a gas turbine, was found to be highly efficient and environmentally friendly. Its potential applications range from automotive to aviation. Further development work is planned to refine its performance and reduce costs. The team behind the project is confident that this technology could revolutionize the way energy is generated and utilized in the future.

Weather Word

The temperature in Oklahoma City is expected to reach a high of 82 degrees Fahrenheit today. The National Weather Service predicts a mostly sunny day with a 10% chance of showers. Winds will be calm, blowing at a speed of 5 mph from the north. The overnight low temperature is expected to drop to 60 degrees.

Ribbon Work Proves to Be Therapy

Woman Revives 'Lost' Indian Art After Bout With Illness

Mrs. Maria Adams, a noted ribbon work artist, has revived the traditional art form of ribbon work that was once popular among Native American tribes in Oklahoma. Mrs. Adams credits her recovery from a recent illness with giving her the strength and inspiration to relearn this lost art form. She now creates intricate ribbon work designs that celebrate Native American culture and history. Mrs. Adams' work is displayed at the Oklahoma Indian Arts and Crafts Center, where visitors can learn more about ribbon work and its significance in Native American art.

Edmond Council To Eye Uses For Proposed Tax

The Edmond City Council is scheduled to vote on the proposed tax on Nov. 14. The tax, which would generate revenue for city services, has been met with mixed reactions from residents. Some city officials argue that the tax is necessary to fund essential services, while others believe it would overburden taxpayers. The council will discuss the tax further and vote on its implementation during the Nov. 14 meeting.

The Hispanic Language Center

The Hispanic Language Center has announced the opening of its new headquarters at 123 S. Broadway Ave. located in downtown Edmond. The center offers classes in Spanish, Portuguese, and other languages to help students improve their language skills. Individuals interested in enrolling in courses are encouraged to visit the center's website. Classes will be held on weekdays from 9 AM to 9 PM, and on weekends from 10 AM to 5 PM.

Student Councils To Meet

New Student Councils will meet in Edmond this fall. The council is made up of representatives from local high schools who discuss and organize events and activities for students. The council will meet on the first Monday of each month at 7 PM. Current topics include planning homecoming events and organizing community service projects. Students interested in participating are encouraged to attend the meetings.

Keep a man who takes a stand

C. H. Spearman, Jr.
Representative-Dist. 81

Spearman's controversial sometimes you admirt him. Sometimes you don't. In our state legislature he's always in the center where the action is. But the people who know him say:

- He's honest and trustworthy.
- He's always been a strong advocate for education.
- He's fought hard for more funding for education and other state programs.
- He's a strong supporter of the arts and culture in our state.
- He's been a leader in the fight against corruption in government.
- He's always been a strong advocate for small businesses.

Spearman has won the hearts of many in our state, and he's a man who's going to be missed. He's a man who's going to be remembered for his dedication to our state and its people.
Window On The Universe

Many Space Theories May Sound Like Science Fiction

Many theories of space have been advanced through the years, and one of the first was the idea that the universe could be finite and static. This idea was championed by the French mathematician Pierre-Simon Laplace, who proposed that the universe was created in a remote past and has been expanding ever since. However, this idea has been largely discredited by modern astronomers, who believe that the universe is much younger and much more dynamic.

In the early 20th century, Einstein introduced his theory of general relativity, which showed that gravity is not a force but rather a curvature of space-time. This theory has been confirmed by many observations, including the bending of light by gravity and the expansion of the universe.

Some theories of space have been more controversial, such as the idea that the universe is infinite and static. This idea was proposed by the Russian mathematician Alexander Friedmann, who suggested that the universe could be infinite and static, as well as expanding and contracting in a cyclic manner. However, this idea has been largely discredited by modern astronomers, who believe that the universe is much younger and much more dynamic.

In the late 20th century, string theory was introduced as a way to unify the forces of nature and predict the behavior of particles. This theory has been controversial, as it has been largely untested and has not yet produced any predictions that can be directly observed.

Theories of space are often used to explain phenomena, such as the expansion of the universe, the presence of dark matter, and the behavior of black holes. These theories are often thought to be very speculative and have not yet been directly observed, but they are still an important part of modern physics and continue to be studied by researchers around the world.

Many Space Theories May Sound Like Science Fiction

By J. L. SLAM

Perusing the science fiction section of your local library, you will discover a vast world of imagination and often, far-fetched theories. These stories, while entertaining, can sometimes seem like pure fantasy. However, in recent years, some of these theories have gained traction in the world of space exploration.

“Many of the theories about cosmic phenomena that were once considered Science Fiction are now being taken seriously by scientists,” said Dr. Alex Smith, a renowned astrophysicist. “Our understanding of the universe is constantly evolving, and these theories play a crucial role in shaping our future perceptions.”

Theories about black holes, dark matter, and the possibility of extraterrestrial life are just a few examples of concepts that once seemed too fantastical to be considered plausible but are now the subject of intense research.

For instance, the existence of black holes was once considered a mere theoretical construct, but with the discovery of gravitational waves, scientists have been able to confirm their existence. Similarly, the concept of dark matter was long dismissed as a purely speculative idea, but recent evidence from the Large Hadron Collider has provided strong support for its existence.

As our knowledge of the universe expands, so too do our understanding of the possibilities. The theories that were once Science Fiction are now realities, and the future of space exploration looks infinitely more promising than ever before.
