$10 Million Demanded

Boy, 12, Found In New Mexico

Hippies Hold Missing State Girl?

BY LARRY CANNON

NORMAN — New Mexico sheriff's detectives and state police will launch an all-out search today of a section of a river on the border between New Mexico and Oklahoma. The search is for a girl who disappeared while on a visit to the Oklahoma City area.

Linda Miles, 12, who was last seen on Monday night, is reported to have been kidnapped by a group of young men who attempted to lure her into their car.

The search will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the intersection of the New Mexico and Oklahoma borders about 10 miles east of the New Mexico state line.

Linda's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Miles of Oklahoma City, have reported their daughter missing to the Oklahoma County Sheriff's Department.

The girl was last seen by her family when she went for a walk along the riverbank. They believe she was taken by a group of young men who tried to lure her into their car.

The search will involve the use of boats and planes to cover the area of the river where Linda was last seen.

Hanoi Ready For Meeting

North Vietnam said Friday it is willing to accept American prisoners of war in return for a total peace settlement.

The offer was made as part of a general US update on the Vietnam War. The US government has been negotiating with North Vietnam for several months.

Panel Urges Approval Of Rights Amendment

A controversial proposal that would provide a new constitutional amendment to protect the rights of minorities was approved by a majority of the Oklahoma state legislature. The proposal, known as the "Rights Amendment," seeks to establish a new set of constitutional rights for minority groups, including protections against discrimination and harassment. The amendment has been the subject of intense debate, with some lawmakers arguing that it is necessary to protect minority rights, while others have expressed concern that it could lead to unintended consequences, such as restricting free speech or interfering with the operation of businesses.

Bicentennial, Huskstering Draws Fire

At the recent bicentennial celebration, a controversial event called "Huskstering" drew fire from critics. The event, which involved the use of traditional Native American ceremonial objects, was criticized by some as an attempt to co-opt and commercialize traditional culture. The organizers of the event defended their actions, arguing that they were simply celebrating the history and culture of the region.

On The Up And Up

The stock market continues to rise, with the Dow Jones Industrial Average hitting a new record high. Investors are encouraged to keep a close eye on the market, as volatility remains high and unexpected events can quickly change the landscape.

Rape Suspect's 'Look-Alike' Found

A rape suspect's 'look-alike' has been arrested, ending a long search. The suspect was identified after a witness recognized the 'look-alike' during a police lineup. The suspect is expected to face charges related to the rape.

Bond Issue Under Attack

The Oklahoma City School District is facing a bond issue vote, but some residents are calling for a referendum. Critics argue that the bond issue is too expensive and that the district should focus on more immediate needs, such as repairing existing buildings.

Foreign Policy Study Asked

A new study on foreign policy is being conducted, with the goal of identifying areas for improvement. The study will examine current foreign policy strategies and recommend changes to better align with national interests.

Communications Mess Uncovered

WASHINGTON — Name recognition is not a thing of the past when it comes to Washington politics. But in the age of social media and the internet, the traditional channels of communication are still crucial.

Washington is often described as a city of networks and connections. This is especially true when it comes to politics. The key to navigating this complex web is effective communication.

At the heart of Washington's political landscape is the White House, which serves as the center of power for the federal government. The president and their staff work tirelessly to communicate with the American public and the international community.

The State Department is another key player in the world of communication. It is responsible for maintaining diplomatic relations with other countries and communicating the United States' policies and values.

The Department of Defense is also a major player in the communication game. It is responsible for communicating with the military and with other countries to ensure the safety of American troops.

In addition to these government agencies, there are a number of private companies that specialize in communication services. These companies work closely with the government to ensure that messages are delivered accurately and efficiently.

Despite the challenges of communication in Washington, there are a number of successful examples that highlight the importance of effective communication. These examples include the communication between the White House and the international community, the communication between the Department of Defense and the military, and the communication between the State Department and other countries.

In conclusion, communication is a vital part of the political process in Washington. Whether it's through the traditional channels or through social media and the internet, effective communication is key to success in the world of politics.

VETERANS DAY

A VETERAN is an American who loves his country—without reservation.

A VETERAN is an American who is willing to lay down his life to uphold the freedoms of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

A VETERAN is an American proud of his flag. He will fight to his death to protect the country for which it stands from those who would dare to dishonor it.

A VETERAN is an American who cherishes his freedom, passionately; serves his country, honorably and supports her willingly.

A VETERAN is an American well-deserving of our appreciation, our love and our prayers, 365 days a year.

A DAY DEDICATED TO PEACE AND FREEDOM FOR ALL.

Components Come Of Age

Just a few years ago, a husband's announcement that he had bought a collection of stereo components was enough to make his wife consider leaving home—perhaps with good reason. Whether it's a collection of little boxes and sets of assorted sound, radio and television, or a wide variety of equally sound, finely crafted pieces of equipment, a number of young couples have been known to part with the equipment in question.

In such situations, it seems the house could hardly explain the owner's reasons for the sudden housecleaning of personal stereo equipment.

Indeed, the lives of sound systems have always been rather predictable. In the past few years, we have seen a steady increase in the number of young couples obtaining stereo equipment and using it for entertainment.

In these days, however, the number of sound systems in use is declining. And it seems the trend is likely to continue. As a result, there are fewer young couples who are able to afford the luxury of a sound system. The reason is simple. The cost of equipment has increased dramatically in recent years, making it impossible for many young couples to afford the luxury of a sound system.

In the past, many young couples would purchase a sound system for their home. However, with the increased cost of equipment, many young couples are unable to afford the luxury of a sound system. As a result, the number of sound systems in use is declining.

In conclusion, the trend of declining interest in sound systems is likely to continue. The cost of equipment has increased dramatically in recent years, making it impossible for many young couples to afford the luxury of a sound system. As a result, the number of sound systems in use is declining.
