The United Nations Security Council yesterday ordered the U.S. to send a rapid reaction force to the area of the Chaco region in South America to prevent any further fighting between Bolivia and Paraguay.

The Security Council voted 12-1 to authorize the rapid reaction force, which is expected to arrive within 48 hours.

The vote came after the United States warned that it would use force if necessary to prevent further fighting.

The Security Council also called for a cease-fire and urged both countries to withdraw their forces from the border area.

The United Nations has been mediating the dispute since December 1971, when Bolivia charged that Paraguay was invading its territory.

The rapid reaction force was requested by the United States, which said it would take action if necessary to prevent further fighting.

News ‘Protection’ Crucial

What it did for us was to bring about a crisis so that the people of the nation could be made aware of the situation and act accordingly. We did it, and we did it quite successfully. This is what we did: we put a price on the people’s heads.

In certain parts of the country, it has been necessary to take extreme measures to prevent the spread of this disease. We have been advised that the situation is critical and that immediate action is required.

5,000 Attend Religious Celebration

The religious celebration was held in the Myriad Convention Center. It was attended by thousands of people who came to listen to the speakers and participate in the service. The image shows a group of people standing in the center of the hall, possibly during a prayer or song. A banner is visible in the background, although the text on the banner is not legible. The scene is well-lit, with artificial lighting illuminating the area. People appear to be actively engaged in the event, with some looking upwards, possibly at the speaker or a larger screen. The atmosphere suggests a solemn and reverent mood, typical of religious gatherings. The text on the banner is not legible, preventing us from understanding the exact context or purpose of the banner. The overall impression is one of a significant religious event, possibly a national or international gathering, given the size and scale of the convention center.
