Title: City May Seek Pet Society's Funds

Subheading: Jobe Probe Lengthy

Main Article: Oklahoma City would have to ask the state to help it collect money now owed by the city's private pet enforcement society. Former City Commissioner and Oklahoman John D. Jobe is now involved in the case. He has been ordered to pay the society $5,000 for services and expenses, and the city is seeking the rest of the money owed.

Revenue Sharing Data Needed

A week-long dispute is pending in the state government over the allocation of revenue sharing funds. The state government believes that the funds should be distributed based on population, while the local governments believe that they should be distributed based on needs. The dispute has caused a lot of tension and uncertainty among local governments.
