Kissinger Won't Bar Mideast Oil Takeover

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and his European counterparts on Tuesday agreed to proceed with the production of oil in the region without the use of the oil embargo.

Kissinger, with Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller and British Foreign Secretary James Cross, met at the White House to discuss the oil crisis.

The meeting was attended by representatives of Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Italy, Norway, Portugal, and Sweden.

The Secretary said:

"I'm not saying there are no circumstances where we would not impose sanctions, but we want to avoid the use of force in such situations."

"We believe that the use of force is not in the interest of the United States or our friends in the region."

"We will work to resolve the oil crisis through diplomatic means."

The People's Voice

The People's Voice is a weekly column that highlights the issues and concerns of the community. This week, we focus on the current state of the economy.

Economy:

The economy is in a state of transition. While there are signs of improvement, there are also challenges to overcome. The unemployment rate remains high, and inflation continues to be a concern. The government is working to stimulate the economy through various measures, such as tax cuts and infrastructure spending.

Education:

The state of education is a matter of concern. There are allegations of corruption and mismanagement in some schools. The quality of education is also being questioned, with concerns about standardized testing and the adequacy of funding for schools.

Healthcare:

The healthcare system is facing significant challenges. The cost of healthcare is rising, and access to care is becoming more difficult. The government is working to develop a national healthcare plan, but progress has been slow.

Environment:

The environment is at risk due to pollution and climate change. The government is working to develop policies to protect the environment, but there is a need for greater public awareness and action.

Social Issues:

Social issues such as immigration, gun control, and civil rights continue to be debated. The government is working to address these issues, but there is a need for greater collaboration and understanding.

The People's Voice encourages the community to stay informed and engaged. Together, we can work towards a better future.
