Poverty Linked To Power

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. census of poverty in America, according to a new survey released today, shows that the Catholic Church is the most common cause of poverty among the country's poor. The study, conducted by the Catholic Church for Economic Development, reveals that almost half of all Americans are "essentially" poor, with their income below the poverty line.

The study also found that the poverty rate among Catholics is significantly higher than among other religious groups. While the poverty rate for the general population is 13.7%, it is 18.6% for Catholics.

The report concludes: "The American Catholic Church is the leading provider of social services and assistance to the poor in this country. The church is the largest employer in the country, providing jobs for millions of people. The church is also the largest contributor to charitable organizations, providing funds to help the poor and marginalized."
