It's Largest Explorer, Producer of Uranium

Kerr-McGee Makes State 'Nuclear Colossus'

By DONALD E. SMITH

Kerr-McGee's discovery of a potential $1 billion uranium deposit in Oklahoma has made the company a giant in the state's mining industry. The discovery could eventually lead to the nation's largest nuclear power plant.

Kerr-McGee, with headquarters in Oklahoma City, has been mining uranium for several years. Its latest find is expected to be the largest in the state. The company plans to begin production in four years.

The discovery is located in Caddo County, which has been a major producer of uranium in Oklahoma. Kerr-McGee's new deposit is estimated to contain about 10,000 tons of uranium ore, enough to supply fuel for one of the nation's largest nuclear power plants.

The company expects to begin mining operations in 1980 and to produce about 2,000 tons of uranium each year. The ore will be shipped to the company's plant in Oklahoma City for processing.

The discovery is expected to create new jobs in the area and to boost the local economy. It will also help meet the nation's growing demand for nuclear power.

In 1979, Kerr-McGee produced about 2,500 tons of uranium, making it one of the nation's leading producers.

2 Plant Violations Minor, No Hazard

BY JIM BARCH

The state Department of Health and Welfare has cited two plant violations at Kerr-McGee's uranium mine in Caddo County. The violations are considered minor and do not pose any hazard to the public.

The first violation involves the use of a portable X-ray machine at the mine. The machine was not properly calibrated, and the violation was cited under 220-5.210 (2)(b). This violation is considered minor and does not pose any hazard to the public.

The second violation involves the use of a portable X-ray machine at the mine. The machine was not properly calibrated, and the violation was cited under 220-5.210 (2)(b). This violation is considered minor and does not pose any hazard to the public.

The company was given 30 days to correct the violations. If the violations are not corrected, the mine may be forced to shut down.

Legislature Opens on Cheerful Note

By JOHN T. SMITH

The state legislature opened with a cheerful mood, and members of both parties were in high spirits.

Speaker of the House, John Doe, welcomed the members and expressed his confidence in the upcoming session.

The governor, John Smith, also spoke, praising the legislature for its hard work and dedication.

The opening day was marked by a number of speeches and debates, and members of all parties were engaged in a lively exchange of ideas.

The session is expected to last several months, and a number of important issues are expected to be discussed, including education, healthcare, and the economy.

The legislature is divided into two houses, the Senate and the House of Representatives, and each chamber is controlled by a majority party.

The governor has a limited role in the legislature, and the sessions are presided over by the Speaker of the House in the Senate and the Speaker of the House in the House of Representatives.

The legislature is expected to conclude its work by early summer.
