Animal of the Week: The Groundhog

The second of February will be Groundhog Day. There is an old story about what happens when this animal comes out of his burrow on this day. If the sun is shining and he sees his shadow, winter will last for six weeks. If the sun is not shining, the animal will not see his shadow, and spring is on its way.

Another name for groundhog is woodchuck. This animal eats grass and plants. In the fall, it gets very fat. Then it goes to sleep, or hibernates, during the winter months.

How do you do it, David?

David Thompson Talks to Kids

Many experts rate David Thompson as the finest college basketball player ever. He was named college Player of the Year last season after leading the North Carolina State Wolfpack to the National Collegiate Championship.

The Mini Page interviewed David after a practice session at the Wolfpack's home court in Raleigh, North Carolina. We asked him to give our readers some tips.

Dribbling: "Always use your finger tips. Never let the ball touch the pads of your hand. Dribble without looking at the ball. Keep your head up to see the whole court."

Passing: "Also use your fingers and follow through to the object that you are passing."

Shooting: "Keep your elbows close to your body. Keep your hand up on your finger tips and follow through. Shoot the basket with your index finger. Keep your hand and arm extended. Make the ball hit the basket."

Defense: "Get in the proper defense stance with your feet up in the bucket. Watch the mid-court of the offensive player and stay between him and the basket. Try to deny the offensive player the ball."

Defensive Rebounding: "You should block out the offensive player. Keep your eyes on the ball. Go up strong and grab the ball with both hands.

Offensive Rebounding: "Keep moving so that the defensive players will not be able to block you from the basket and be sure to follow your shot through to the basket."

Jumping: "Jump your hardest each time. Your pulse won't go up if you are shooting. David has been known to jump as high as 45 inches!"

About This 'Gasohol'

Gasohol is a blend of gas and alcohol that some believe may solve our energy crisis. While the idea of using alcohol to fuel our cars is appealing, the production of alcohol from grains or corn for mass consumption is not. This could lead to shortages of food, as more corn would be used to make alcohol than to feed people. Therefore, gasohol is not the solution to our energy problems.
