WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) - The United States Navy says it has captured an Eritrean army trooper who was among the soldiers who attacked a UN peacekeeping force in Ethiopia.

The capture came after the soldiers fired upon a team of UN peacekeepers in the town of Gash-Barka in the Tigray region of northern Ethiopia on Thursday.

The attack was one of several that have taken place in the region in recent weeks, causing tension between Ethiopia and Eritrea.

The United Nations has condemned the attacks and called for them to cease.

Eritrea, a small country bordered by Ethiopia, Eritrea, Sudan, and Djibouti, has been at odds with its neighbors for years over territorial disputes and historical conflicts.

The most recent conflict between the two countries began in November 2020, when Eritrea accused Ethiopia of attacking its territory.

Since then, there have been several clashes along the border, with both sides accusing each other of provoking violence.

Efforts to resolve the conflict have been ongoing, but have so far failed to achieve a lasting peace.

The United States has called for both countries to engage in dialogue and work towards a negotiated resolution.

A spokesperson for the U.S. Department of State said in a statement that the U.S. continues to support efforts to promote peace and stability in the region.

The statement noted that the U.S. remains committed to working with our partners to support a negotiated resolution to the conflict.

The spokesperson added that the U.S. continues to call for both countries to refrain from采取 provocative actions in the region.
Theater Bill Hopes Fade
