HALL, TAYLOR CONVICTED

By GARY MUNICH

The losses said they'll win an appeal, and struggled to keep their spirits up. The salaries were all nailed and paid on the book.

The men said they won't be the first time. In 1996, after the Federal Reserve Board of Governors announced the lawsuit against former Gov. David Hall, the latest to be convicted and to be followed, the Oklahoma Journal reported. It was that day that the

State Reorganization Faces Rough Time

By JOHN GILLORY

It has been announced that the week that one of Gov. David Boren's most notable accomplishments is the establishment of the state's first online service for the disabled. The system is already being tested in the Oklahoma City area, and is expected to reach all parts of the state within the next year.

The governor's office released a statement today, urging citizens to support the efforts of the online service. "We believe this is a major step forward in providing services for all Oklahomans," Governor Boren said.

The online service will allow citizens to access government services 24 hours a day, seven days a week. In addition, it will provide information on community services, such as health care, education, and employment.

A Sunshine side benefit of the online service is that it will provide information on community services, such as health care, education, and employment.

 Rocky Island

Refused Loan

By STEVE HOPKINS

The Federal Reserve Board of Governors has approved the Rock Island's application for a loan. The bank has been struggling with cash flow for several months, and the loan will help cover its operating expenses.

"We're very pleased to have received the $5 million loan," said Rock Island President Charles Black. "This will help us get through a difficult period and we're confident that we can repay the loan on time."}

Teen Charged In Tot'S Death

A teenager was arrested and charged with murder in the death of a young girl in Oklahoma City.

Malcolm Chandler, 14, and Mrs. Charles Chandler, 23, of Children's Memorial Medical Center, were charged with first-degree murder in the death of a 12-year-old girl.

The girl, identified as Malene Chandler, was found unresponsive in a bedroom of the Chandler home on Monday morning. She was later declared dead at a hospital.

The Chandler family has been described as close-knit, and the community is mourning the loss of the young girl.

Brain Cancer Victim

Susan Hayward Dies

SUSAN HAYWARD

SUSAN HAYWARD

BY BERNIE BILLS

SUSAN HAYWARD

"I've never been a morning person," the actress said in an interview. "I hate getting up early, but I always manage to pull myself together and go out there and make those shots."

The actress, who starred in films like "The Big Sleep" and "All The King's Men," was diagnosed with brain cancer in 1973. Despite treatment, her condition worsened and she passed away on September 10, 1979.

"It's too bad," her friend, actress Elizabeth Taylor, said. "She was a wonderful person, and I'm sure she's in a better place now."

The actress was remembered at a private memorial service in Los Angeles on September 11, 1979.

"She was a true Hollywood legend," said Taylor. "She was loved by everyone, and she will be missed deeply."

Hayward was born in New York City on November 7, 1931. She began her career as a model and appeared in several films before landing her first major role in "The Big Sleep." She went on to star in numerous films, earning critical acclaim and several Academy Award nominations.

"She was a real talent," said actress Mia Farrow, who starred in Hayward's final film, "Fanny." "She had a unique quality that made her stand out on screen."

Hayward's death came as a shock to many, and her loss was mourned by the film community.

"She was a true Hollywood legend," said Taylor. "She was loved by everyone, and she will be missed deeply."

Long Run Not Soon Enough

Those days the early pioneers in the West and the Southwest struggled with the danger of floods, fires, drought and other natural elements, we must remember that they were doing all they could just to survive. The pioneer life was one of hardship and struggle, but it was a way of life that tested their mettle.

This is the story of the pioneers who tamed the West. They were adventuresome but they were also wise. They knew that a good life was not just about survival but about building something better. Today, we must remember that it is not easy to build a new life, but it is worth the effort.

Daffodils Seize Winds Of March With Beauty

By JANET NOBLE

‘Twas the wind that blew from the north, that caught the daffodils in a swirl of petals, dancing and twirling in the air. The petals, like tiny gold ribbons, cascaded down to the ground, creating a carpet of beauty. The breeze was strong, and the daffodils were determined to make the most of the moment. They stretched their petals wide, basking in the glory of the wind. It was a moment of pure joy, a moment of pure beauty. The daffodils were the stars of the show, and the wind was their partner in this dance.

Students Have Own ‘Offices’ At OCC

By ROBIN ADAMS SHAMIM

The students at OCC have their own ‘offices’ where they can work on their assignments and projects. The spaces are furnished with desks, chairs, and computers, and are located in a quiet area, away from the hustle and bustle of the rest of the campus. The students are excited about having their own ‘offices’, as it gives them a sense of independence and freedom. The spaces are also equipped with printing and scanning machines, which the students find very convenient.

OCC Fund Drive ‘Going Real Good’

The fund drive at OCC is ‘going real good’. So far, the school has received donations from numerous individuals and organizations. The funds raised will be used to support various programs and initiatives at OCC. The students are very excited about the fund drive, and are doing their best to encourage others to donate. The school is grateful for the support it has received, and is confident that the fund drive will be a success.

U.S. Vacations Not Slumping

Sylvia Porter, an expert on vacations, says that U.S. vacations are not slumping. According to Porter, many people are still traveling within the U.S. and exploring new destinations. She says that the popularity of road trips and staycations is on the rise, and that people are looking for ways to save money while still having a fun vacation. Porter predicts that the trend of U.S. vacations will continue, as people seek out new experiences and explore the beauty of their own country.

The Ugly Diamond

Like the poem among the daffodils, the ugly diamond, once thought to be worthless, can now shine with a unique beauty. The discovery of a new way to produce diamonds has revolutionized the industry, making it possible to create diamonds that are more durable and harder than natural ones. This new method involves converting carbon into diamonds using high pressure and high temperature. The result is a diamond that is not only beautiful, but also incredibly strong. This discovery has opened up new possibilities for the diamond industry, and has shown that even the ugliest diamond can have a new lease on life.

Baptist Pastors
Conference Set

April 28-30, 1975, a meeting of Baptist Pastors will be held at the First Baptist Church in Oklahoma City. The theme of the conference is "Pastors and Growth.

A message of health and hope has been conveyed by the closing remarks of the late Dr. George R. Roberts, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Oklahoma City. In his final address, he spoke about the challenges facing the church today and the importance of spiritual growth and leadership in meeting those challenges.

The conference was well-attended, with a total of 120 pastors present. The closing session was marked by a stirring address by Dr. Roberts, which emphasized the need for continued leadership and vision in the church. The conference was a success and it is hoped that similar events will be held in the future.

Baha’is To Celebrate

Bahá’ís throughout the world will be celebrating the 200th anniversary of the birth of Bahá’u’lláh, the founder of the Bahá’í Faith. This anniversary will be marked by a variety of activities, including conferences, symposiums, and community gatherings.

One of the keynote speakers at the conference was William G. Carey, a Bahá’í scholar and author. He spoke about the significance of Bahá’u’lláh’s teachings and the importance of spreading his message to the world.

The conference was held at the University of Oklahoma and was attended by over 500 people. The closing session was marked by a stirring address by Carey, which emphasized the need for continued leadership and vision in the Bahá’í Faith.

Faith Challenges Even Death Itself

Dr. David Price

"Faith is hard to measure or define. It is a quality of the human spirit that cannot be observed directly. Yet, it is a part of every human existence. Faith is the belief in something beyond oneself, something that is not visible or tangible. It is the foundation upon which we build our lives."

Price concluded his talk by stressing the importance of faith in times of crisis and uncertainty. He encouraged his listeners to keep their faith strong and to remain true to their beliefs.

The conference was well-attended, with a total of 120 pastors present. The closing session was marked by a stirring address by Price, which emphasized the need for continued leadership and vision in the church. The conference was a success and it is hoped that similar events will be held in the future.

Baha’i beliefs and practices are based on the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh, the founder of the Bahá’í Faith. Bahá’í teachings emphasize the oneness of humanity and the potential for the development of a world community. Bahá’ís believe in the gradual evolution of society and the importance of spiritual growth and development.

The conference concluded with a closing prayer by Dr. Price. He urged his listeners to continue their spiritual journey and to remain true to their beliefs.

The conference was held at the University of Oklahoma and was attended by over 500 people. The closing session was marked by a stirring address by Price, which emphasized the need for continued leadership and vision in the Bahá’í Faith.

Sin, Guilt Prevent Fellowship With God

"We may be brothers, but we have not spoken to each other in five years," a man recently recounted. He explained that for a number of years he and his brother had been friends and business partners. Then, severe difficulties had to be made about expansion of the company. Bitter words were spoken and the two men had not even spoken to each other since. They were related but there was no personal relationship between them.

Many people like to point out that we are related to God through creation. The problem the Bible makes clear is that we have rebelled against God and gotten out of relationship to him. We can only gain the needed relationship through Jesus Christ and keep people from enjoying fellowship with God. Our relationship with him is hindered because of the separation that causes them.

The writer of the Book of Hebrews talked about the reasons why Christ can restore our relationship with God. In Chapter five is told that Christ gave us "hearts sprinkled clean from an evil conscience." The picture comes from the custom of the Hebrew high priest sprinkling the blood of a sacrifice on the altar as a sacrifice for people's sins.

The Book of Hebrews gives great deal of attention to the idea of restoring our relationship to God. It talks about God's new covenant with man. A covenant is an agreement. God made new agreements with people during the Old Testament era. Most of these were conditional. God agreed to do certain things for his people if they obeyed him and served him in specified ways. The new covenant would not involve documents and tablets of stone. Instead, God would change the hearts of the people so they would want to do what God desired of them. In this sense the covenant would be an internal one that grew out of our faith in Christ. So the Bible talks about the relationship of a new covenant.

The relationship is one of faith. Because we have faith in Christ, we can come into the presence of God with assurance. We are assured of forgiveness, cleansing, a clean conscience, and eternity with God. We have faith in a faithful God who will provide everything we need to live in right relationship to God.

The relationship is one that results in obedience. People who know God and are right related to Him want to do what God wills. Part of obedience is working for Christ. Love for Christ and our fellow Christians as we listen to the commandments of Christ. Worship becomes part of the pattern of our obedience. We cannot neglect to worship with our fellow Christians because we recognize that God expects us to do this.

Our relationships with God are made possible because Christ died for our sins. This Sacrifice makes possible the kind of life that allows us to enjoy a daily relationship and makes it more than a matter of just being related. (EDITOR'S NOTE: The preceding column by Rev. Richard B. Douglas is a reflection on this week's International Sunday School Lesson taken from Hebrews 8:12 and 10:19-25.)
