Gas Used
In Prison
Uprising

McLAEFFER (UD) - Prisoners at the prison in Columbus are threatening to start a gas protest in a bid to get their requests heard.

WELLER says he's not sure how far the protest will go, but he said he is hoping for some sort of resolution.

Uprising is due to protesting their living conditions.

Freight Embargo

The Rock Island Railroad announced Friday it is increasing freight rates on a number of commodities, including coal, stone, and building materials.

The railroad said the increases were due to the increased cost of operating the railway and to maintain its service to customers.

The rates will be effective on October 1.

Loser Raps Restrictions On Office

Mr. Raper, the IRS agent, raps a rap song about the restrictions on office space. He mentions that the office has been restricted to only three people, which is not enough for the people working there. He also mentions that the restrictions are due to the regulations of the IRS.

The restrictions were implemented to prevent any activities that might be seen as illegal or unethical. The IRS has strict regulations that all offices must follow, and these restrictions are just one of them.

Mr. Raper also mentions that the restrictions are causing a lot of stress for the people working there. They are having to work long hours and are not able to take breaks, which is causing them to be tired and irritable.

Despite the restrictions, Mr. Raper is determined to keep working and is determined to meet the requirements of the IRS.

TV MAILBAG

The mailbag is filled with letters from viewers. Some letters are about the restrictions on office space, while others are about the regulations of the IRS.

One letter mentions that the restrictions are causing a lot of stress for the people working there. The letter mentions that the restrictions are causing people to work long hours and are not able to take breaks, which is causing them to be tired and irritable.

Another letter mentions that the regulations of the IRS are causing a lot of stress for the people working there. The letter mentions that the regulations are causing people to work long hours and are not able to take breaks, which is causing them to be tired and irritable.

The mailbag is also filled with letters about the regulations of the IRS and the restrictions on office space. The letters mention that the regulations are causing a lot of stress for the people working there and are not able to take breaks, which is causing them to be tired and irritable.

THE CAROL BURNETT SHOW

Like the swan among the ducks, coal has grown into today's bright, beautiful solution to the increased need for electricity.

Coal has earned its place among the other resources used to produce electricity. It is easily burnt by power plants to create the heat needed to generate electricity. Coal is also abundant. The coal supply in this country is estimated at hundreds of years. Oil and natural gas resources already face rapidly diminishing supplies and rising costs.

OG&E has contracted for long-term coal from Wyoming. This coal will be used as fuel for the new Muskogee power plant OG&E is building. And, $60 million is being spent on pollution control equipment including electrostatic precipitators. These devices help protect the environment by holding back unwanted particulates produced when coal is burned.

So, what might have been a diamond, may soon prove to be even more precious to you than a sparkler. For with coal, there will be no flame for energy. Instead, the prospect is for the dawn of a new era - one of enough electrical energy for the future. For, as long as we can create heat, you can and will have electricity.

Your future looks electric.
