Brribry Suspected in Saigon

Phony Orphans Ride Airlift

From Journal Wire
SAN FRANCISCO — Some of the Vietnamese "orphans" listed on the rolls of U.S. orphanages here are actually not orphans but children of U.S. families living in the United States. They are children who have never been adopted by U.S. parents and have been sent to the United States for a possible adoption. The children have been brought to the United States by a private contractor who claims to have the necessary documentation to support their adoption. However, the contractor has been accused of fraud and the children have been held in a government facility. The contractor, who is a Vietnamese national, has been arrested and charged with human trafficking.

The People Problem

The world's population picture is one of vast growth. This growth has led to a situation where the number of people is increasing at an alarming rate, and the problem is exacerbated by the lack of resources and infrastructure to support such a rapidly growing population.

E. O. Wilson, a biologist, writes in "The People Problem" that the human population is growing at a rate of 2% per year, which means that the population doubles every 35 years. This rapid growth is putting a strain on the environment and the resources available to support human life.

According to Wilson, the world's population has doubled in the last 40 years, and it is projected to double again in the next 40 years. This growth is occurring in countries with limited resources and infrastructure, which is leading to a situation where the population is growing faster than the ability to support it.

Wilson argues that the problem is not just about the number of people, but also about the way we are using the resources available to us. He suggests that we need to find ways to manage our population growth and use resources more efficiently to avoid a future of scarcity.

Our Off Tyme

Why

Dear Editor,

I wanted to share my thoughts on the current state of the economy. It seems like everyone is talking about inflation and the high cost of living, but I don't see much change in my own life. I think the government needs to do more to address these issues and help people like me.

Sincerely,
[Name]
