City Gears Up For Closing Crosstown

By TERRY MAJZIK

Although the right turn lane on the 121st Street and I-240 intersection in Bixby has been closed for the past month, city officials are preparing for the upcoming Crosstown extension.

The Oklahoma City Council approved a resolution on Monday to close the intersection and the open lane between 121st Street and the I-240 service road.

The project is expected to be completed by the end of the year, but city officials are already planning for the future.

"We’re excited to move forward with this project and improve the safety and efficiency of the intersection," said City Councilor Tim McAllister. "This is a great opportunity for our community to invest in infrastructure that will benefit us for years to come."

The intersection will be closed during the construction phase, and the road will be temporarily diverted to the existing lanes.

"We understand the inconvenience this may cause for some drivers," said City Councilor Jolie Campbell. "However, we believe it is necessary to ensure the safety and longevity of the road."

The project is estimated to cost $3 million and is expected to generate an economic impact of $6 million for the local economy.

"This is a significant project for our city," said Mayor Jim Gilmore. "We are committed to investing in the growth and development of Oklahoma City."
