Refugees Arrive, Welcome Certain

By DONALD E. MILLER
United Press International

The waves of thousands of boatloads of Vietnamese refugees have continued to grow in volume, with news reports from the Vietnam coast indicating that the flow is now reaching 8,000 a day. The United States and other nations have been unable to cope with the influx, leading to widespread criticism of the response to the crisis.

The arrival of the refugees was marked by growing protests and increased criticism of the United States and other nations. The United Nations reports that over 1 million Vietnamese refugees have fled to the United States, but the world's population is putting up resistance on the other side.

2,000 Due At Chaffeey

By J. E. GULLIN
The Register-Tribune

The 2,000 Vietnamese refugees expected to arrive at nearby Port Chaffeey, South Carolina, on April 11, 1979, is a significant milestone in the evacuation of Vietnamese refugees from Vietnam.

The refugees, who are being brought here under the provisions of the Camp David Accords, are being housed in a specially constructed refugee camp at Chaffeey, which is being run by local authorities.
