Pinball!

By NANCY AGRAN

Pinball, that elusively entertaining game, is in vogue again. It is replacing the video arcade and attracting a large following of both young and old. The game is played on a table with a screen made up of small, illuminated squares. A ball is launched into the screen and the object is to hit as many squares as possible without striking a barrier or losing the ball. The ball bounces on convex and concave surfaces and hits up to 200 squares. The higher the score, the more difficult the game becomes. The game is both skillful and a challenge.

Help Buck The Trend

Concerns about crime and the soaring crime rate have been vocal in recent years. It seems like every other day there is a new story about a crime being committed or an effort being made to fight crime. This is not just in our state, but in communities across the country.

This program, which is called the Heart Attack Prevention Program, is aimed at identifying high-risk individuals and providing them with the resources they need to prevent a heart attack.

Billy Graham

In this article, Dr. Graham states: "The job of a propagandist is to influence public opinion by spreading information that is not necessarily true. This can be done through the use of propaganda techniques, such as repetition, emotional appeals, and selective presentation of facts."

Rance Hood Painting Circles Around His Past

By NANCY GILSON

Rance Hood's paintings are highly detailed, achieving an almost photographic effect. His colors are vibrant, and his compositions are intricate, often depicting scenes of daily life with a mix of realism and abstraction. His work is influenced by the landscapes of the American West, and he is known for his ability to capture the essence of the land and its people. In his recent series, Hood explores the theme of memory and nostalgia, using his paintings to evoke the past and the stories of the people who inhabit it. His paintings are sold at galleries across the country, and he has received critical acclaim for his unique approach to art. Despite his success, Hood remains humble, attributing his success to the support of his family and friends.
