Loneliness Different Experience For Elderly

By HILL STRONG

The loneliness of the elderly is not the same as that of younger people. Elderly individuals have a different perspective on life, and they may be more sensitive to changes in their environment. For instance, an elderly person who is used to living in a particular neighborhood may feel distressed if they are forced to move to a new location.

The elderly may also experience a sense of isolation, as they may feel that they are no longer a part of the community. This can be particularly challenging for those who have lived in the same place for a long time.
