Talihina Funds Hiked

By JOHN GILLES
The News Leader

An feud and a term period of budgetary restrictions to be hiked, which would result in a $1,000,000 deficit for the Talihina School District. The budget, which was presented to the Board of Education last week, shows a deficit of $1,000,000 for the coming school year. The deficit is due to cuts in state funding and increased operating costs.

The school board is expected to vote on the budget this week. If the budget is approved, it will go to the state legislature for consideration. The legislature will review the budget and may decide to allocate additional funds to the school district.

Another issue that will be discussed is the proposed construction of a new school building. The district is facing overcrowding and needs additional space for its growing student population. The school board is considering several options, including building a new school or renovating the existing facilities.

The Talihina School District is one of many school districts in the state facing budgetary challenges. The state has cut funding for education in recent years, leading to increased costs and reduced services.

Consumer Bill Wins In Senate

The Washington News Bureau

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill designed to protect consumers from deceptive marketing practices has been passed by the Senate. The bill, which was introduced by Senator John Smith, aims to prevent companies from making false claims about their products and services. The bill now moves to the House of Representatives for consideration.

The bill would require companies to provide clear and accurate information about their products and services, including any potential risks or side effects. It would also prohibit companies from using misleading advertising or making false claims about the effectiveness of their products.

The Senate vote was 71-20, with all but two senators voting in favor of the bill. Senator Smith said he was encouraged by the strong support for the bill and hoped it would become law soon.

Winter Dries DEA"Dooms Presidential Site Blocked

By JOHN GILLES
The News Leader

An attempt to block construction of the new Presidential Site has been made by a group of protesting activists. The site, which is intended to be a display of America's presidential history, has faced opposition from some environmental groups.

The activists, led by Jane Doe, have erected a series of protest signs and barricades around the site, preventing construction workers from entering the area. They argue that the site would have a negative impact on the surrounding environment and should not be built.

The site is intended to be a museum and educational facility dedicated to the history of American presidents. It is scheduled to open in 2024 and is expected to attract thousands of visitors each year.

The activists say they will continue to protest until their concerns are addressed. They are calling on the government to consider alternative sites for the Presidential Site or to cancel the project altogether.

The city of Oklahoma City is facing a shortage of qualified applicants for several open positions. The city has been unable to fill several vacant positions in the police department, fire department, and other city agencies.

The city has raised salaries and offered benefits to attract more applicants, but has still been unable to fill all open positions. The city is working to identify ways to improve recruitment efforts and increase the number of applicants for open positions.

The shortage of qualified applicants has prompted the city to consider hiring from other areas or implementing other strategies to fill open positions. The city is working to find solutions to address the shortage of qualified applicants and ensure that critical positions are filled.

A Senate bill intended to prevent the sale of certain types of prescription drugs has been passed by the Senate. The bill, introduced by Senator Jane Doe, aims to protect consumers from the sale of dangerous and addictive drugs.

The bill would prohibit the sale of drugs that have been illegally diverted from legitimate sources, such as pharmacies and hospitals. It would also require pharmaceutical companies to establish systems to prevent the sale of these drugs.

The Senate vote was 68-2, with all but two senators voting in favor of the bill. Senator Doe said she was pleased with the strong support for the bill and hoped it would become law soon.

The bill now moves to the House of Representatives for consideration. If passed, it would become law and take effect immediately.

The Senate bill is one of several bills intended to address the opioid crisis in the state. Other bills have focused on increasing penalties for those who illegally sell prescription drugs and requiring pharmacies to establish systems to prevent theft.
