Hospital Finds Smuggled Drugs

By BILL RUSSELL
The Journal

The Washington Post Service WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency and the Drug Enforcement Administration have discreetly begun an investigation into allegations that a soccer player had been caught smuggling drugs.

The allegations, which have been circulating for several weeks, involved a player for the North Korean national team, who was arrested in September on charges of smuggling cocaine.

The player, who has been identified as Do Ho Sung, was stopped at an airport in New York on his way back to North Korea.

The investigation is ongoing, and it is not clear what action will be taken.

Meanwhile, the North Korean government has denied any involvement in drug smuggling.

Social Security Not Trillion In Red

Q. Is it true that Social Security is over one trillion dollars in the hole and that it's a "managed trust fund"? A. Yes, but this is a misnomer, and it's more accurate to refer to it as a "fully funded" trust fund. The system has been well managed, with contributions paid into the fund by employees and employers, and benefits paid out to retirees. At the end of the fiscal year, there is a surplus of funds in the Social Security Trust Fund. This surplus is invested in U.S. Treasury bills, which are essentially loans to the federal government. The interest earned on these investments helps to finance the benefits that are paid out to beneficiaries. It is important to note that the Social Security system is not facing a "trillion dollar" hole, but rather a projected long-term deficit due to an aging population and rising health care costs. The system is designed to be sustainable over the long term, with adjustments made as needed to ensure its financial viability.
