School Pact Near?

By HARRY CUNNING

University's Cedric Boren and fracking contractor Doris Smith have agreed to a settlement pact that would allow Boren to use Smith's land for the school. Boren has agreed to pay $5 million to Smith as part of the agreement.

The agreement is expected to be signed in the coming weeks, according to sources. The settlement comes after years of legal battles between the two parties over the use of the land.

Boren has previously been sued by Smith for using the land without permission. Smith has also accused Boren of property damage and other violations.

The settlement agreement includes a $5 million fine to be paid to Smith, as well as the transfer of certain rights to Boren. The agreement is expected to be finalized in the next few weeks.

Boren is a major player in the fracking industry and has faced numerous legal challenges in the past. The settlement comes as the industry faces increased scrutiny over its impact on the environment and local communities.
