Poe Jurors Talk 6 Hours, Then Retire

By JOHN CHELSEA

The Oklahoma Journal

A seven-man, seven-woman jury deliberated nearly six hours Tuesday morning without agreeing on a verdict in the trial of Oklahoma City barber Trudy C. Poe and three alleged puts, who were tried before Judge John M. Drugga.

The jury was put into charge of the 6:20 p.m. and 30 minutes on the 46th floor of the court house, where the trial was held.

City Manager Bob Moore indicated last week that he might force the city council to cut $2 million from the proposed $21 million capital outlay budget for fiscal year ending June 30.

The council will have to make its decision on the plan next week, and Moore said he might force the city toward a possible cut if the council does not approve the plan.

By United Press International

BOSTON, June 15—

Some members of the Oklahoma House of Representatives have expressed concern over the state's budget and the need for new revenue sources.

One member, a Democrat from Tulsa, said, "We need more revenue to meet the challenges of the future." Another, a Republican from Oklahoma City, concurred, saying, "We must find new ways to generate revenue." The state's budget is projected to have a deficit of $500 million by the end of the fiscal year.

Former Governors Back Boren Reform

TULSA (AP) —

Three former governors of Oklahoma have endorsed the bill by Sen. Tom Boren that would create a state lottery to help fund education.

Former Governors Dewey Bartlett, Henry Bellard and David Boren, along with other similar leaders, have urged support for the bill.

"We believe it is necessary for us to take action," said Bartlett.

"The lottery is a proven way to generate revenue," added Bellard.

"We support any effort to increase the state's funding for education," said Boren.

The bill, which would establish a state lottery, has gained support from both Republicans and Democrats.

"We need to find a way to fund our education system," said a Democrat.

"The lottery is a fair way to raise revenue," added a Republican.

The bill is currently pending in the Senate and is expected to be voted on soon.
State Builders' Leader Urges Ford To Sign Housing Bill

President Indicates Veto Plan

Ford to "Forbear" Unpopular Move

By ROBERT DAUBNER

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Ford, acting on advice of his aides, will today officially announce his intention to veto a sweeping housing bill that would have applied to all public and private housing projects in the country.

Ford, who was informed of the plan by his aides yesterday, says he has decided to "forbear" the unpopular measure in order to avoid further divisiveness in the administration. The measure, which was passed by both houses of Congress, would have required developers of new housing to pay 50% of the cost of construction in the form of federal housing subsidies.

Ford's aides have informed him that he would have a difficult time persuading Congress to override his veto, and that he would lose valuable time if he took the matter to the courts.

Asked how the administration would handle the situation, White House spokesman Harry Bezos said, "We are hopeful that the president's stance will be the final word, and that Congress will act in the interest of the American people by passing a bill that will help housing developments."

Future Role Of Rural Colleges

A recent report of the President's Commission on Higher Education, 1957, speaks of the need for rural colleges and universities to develop "a new role for rural education which is based on the recognition of the importance of the rural areas to the nation's future welfare and economic development." The report points out that there are 1500 rural colleges and universities in the United States, with a total enrollment of about 200,000 students. These institutions are currently offering a wide variety of programs, including agriculture, engineering, business, and liberal arts.

The people of rural areas have traditionally been concerned with the needs of their communities and have been able to adapt to changing circumstances. However, there is a growing recognition that the future of rural areas depends on the development of new strategies for economic development. Many rural colleges and universities are already making efforts to increase their role in the development of rural communities.

The report also notes that the rural colleges and universities are often located in areas that are experiencing economic decline. As a result, there is a need for these institutions to develop new strategies for attracting and retaining students. The report suggests that these institutions could be used as a source of leadership to help develop new strategies for economic development in rural areas.

The report concludes that the rural colleges and universities have a critical role to play in the development of rural areas. The people of rural areas have a stake in the success of these institutions and should be encouraged to support them.

Sin: Not Issue

How Come?

Floyd Gentry

We have been talking a lot about the controversy that is currently raging over the issue of sin. It seems to me that the people who are most concerned about sin are the ones who are most likely to commit it. This is because sin is a reflection of the attitudes and values that are prevalent in society. If we want to reduce the incidence of sin, we need to address the underlying causes of it.

Home Canning Risky

The use of home canning is a popular way to preserve food. However, it is not a safe practice. If you are not careful, you can end up with botulism or other foodborne illnesses. The best way to avoid these problems is to follow the guidelines for canning food.

End Of World Predicted

The end of the world is not imminent. There are many reasons to believe that the world will continue to exist for a long time. The best way to prepare for the future is to focus on building a strong society and a healthy environment.

A Change In The Weather

The weather is changing. The climate is warming. This is a result of the increase in greenhouse gases in the atmosphere. The effects of this change are already being felt. We need to take action to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and to adapt to the changes that are already occurring.
