Waste Water Center Funded

By HENRY GLENN

A waste water treatment center proposed for the town of Oak Neon is being opposed by the town's residents, who say the facility will cause a nuisance. The proposed facility, to be located at the end of Oak Neon Drive, would treat sewage from the town and several annexed areas. The residents say the center will cause odors and noise, and they want it moved to a more remote location.

Jane Fonda Addresses Prostitutes

JANE FONDA, left, with associates, is pictured at her San Francisco office. She recently spoke to a group of prostitutes about her decision to leave the feminist movement. Fonda said she felt pressured to conform to the movement's ideals, which she found stifling. She said she wants to pursue her own interests and focus on her acting career.

She didn't have much sympathy for the women, saying they should be grateful for the opportunities they were given. "They just want to find themselves sexually," she said. "They're not interested in the revolutions of their time."

Cure For A Headache

Another nasty headache for our leaders is the budget stalemate in Congress. As a result of the budget crisis, the government will run out of money on March 22. The problem is being exacerbated by the fact that the House is controlled by the Democrats and the Senate by the Republicans, making it difficult to pass a budget agreement. Congress must act quickly to avoid a government shutdown.

A particularly neat portion of the country’s fiscal health is the national debt. The current national debt is over $25 trillion, and it continues to rise. The debt is a result of government spending, which is outpacing revenue. Congress has a responsibility to address this issue, as a rising national debt can have serious implications for future generations. It is essential to find a balance between spending and revenue to ensure that the country remains financially stable.

That’s Where Rub Is

The Truth Outs

It isn’t a long and tedious editorial, but it’s the kind that makes people think. This is a message to all of us, especially those in leadership positions, to be honest and transparent in our actions. People deserve to know the truth, even if it’s not what they want to hear.

Dr. Johnson, professor of literature at the University of California, said, “Honesty is the best policy.” This is a timeless truth that applies to all aspects of life, including politics. We must strive to be truthful and accountable in our decisions and actions, as this will earn the trust of the people we serve.

Why Not School Busying?

Paul Harvey

The editorial suggests that school busing is a flawed idea. It argues that it is not the best way to address the issue of education and that alternative solutions should be considered. The editorial points out that busing can be expensive and that it may not always be effective in improving education outcomes. It encourages policymakers to explore other options that may be more beneficial for students and communities.

Dumpling Unwanted Animals Is Cruel

Henry Williams

The editorial discusses the issue of animal welfare and the treatment of animals in the food industry. It argues that dumpling unwanted animals is cruel and that there are better ways to manage agricultural production. The editorial suggests that policymakers should consider alternatives to the current system, such as reducing meat consumption and promoting sustainable farming practices.

U.S. Should Provide For Old People Too

Sylvia Parker

The editorial calls for the U.S. government to provide support for older Americans. It argues that the current system of Social Security and Medicare is inadequate and that more needs to be done to support older people. The editorial suggests that policymakers should consider expanding these programs and exploring new ways to provide financial assistance to older Americans.

Courageous Leaders Needed

Jack Anderson

The editorial discusses the importance of courageous leaders in society. It argues that our leaders must be willing to take risks and make difficult decisions, even when it is not popular. The editorial suggests that our leaders should be guided by a sense of justice and fairness, and that they should be willing to speak up for what is right, even when it is challenging.

The People’s Voice

Reporters’ Rights Divine?

This editorial explores the concept of reporters’ rights and the role of journalism in society. It suggests that reporters have a crucial role in holding power to account and that their work is essential to a free and democratic society. The editorial argues that reporters should be protected and that their rights should be respected.

It’s Time for FBI Frankness

Franklin Delano Roosevelt

The editorial discusses the U.S. government’s relationship with the FBI and suggests that there is a need for frankness and transparency. It argues that the FBI needs to be more open and honest with the public and with Congress, and that it should be subject to oversight and accountability. The editorial suggests that policymakers should consider reforms to improve the FBI’s operations and ensure that it is serving the public interest.

Arbitration Has Advantages

Sylvia Parker

The editorial discusses the advantages of arbitration, particularly in the context of labor disputes. It argues that arbitration can be a more efficient and cost-effective way to resolve disputes than traditional court proceedings. The editorial suggests that policymakers should consider expanding the use of arbitration in labor disputes and other areas where it may be beneficial.

Is Nicklaus’ March Winding Down?

Woods, Fla. - Not only does the man sit on a throne, he acts like one, too. When the players' chums are all huddled in a corner at the Ritz-Carlton, Gary Woodland volunteers to conduct the orchestra. He's a little bit out of his element, but Woodland's at least got a lot of energy.

The putting is all right, too. Although the number of putts per round is down, he's still got a lot of strokes. And that's the problem. Woodland is coming to the end of his March, and he's got to start thinking about the majors and the Players Championship.

Mercedes Stars

The Meredith star is on fire. In fact, Meredith and James Mason play the roles of a married couple, (somehow) "The Hours." Their story, "The Hours," is being distributed by Fruit. Meredith and Mason are stars of the Hollywood scene, and their roles are well-suited to their screen personas, which are both noted for their sensitivity and depth. Their characters, like the majority of characters in the film, are complex and nuanced, and their chemistry is undeniable. The film is a true reflection of the Hollywood lifestyle, and the actors bring a sense of authenticity to their roles.

Women's Roles Growing

By DICK ELLINGTON

HOLLYWOOD - More and more women are being discovered and their roles are being expanded in the film industry. This is particularly true in the genre of romantic comedies. In recent years, women have been given more opportunities to showcase their talents and to take on roles that were once reserved for men. This trend is expected to continue in the coming years, as the film industry becomes more inclusive and diverse.

Burton's Binges
Frightened Liz

The other day I read where Liz Taylor hasn't been around Beverly Hills for some time and she's been the subject of much speculation. I wonder if she's moved to Europe or to New York. It's true that she's been away from Hollywood for a while, but I'm not sure she's completely disappeared. She was spotted in Paris a few weeks ago, and I've heard rumors that she's in New York. It's possible she's taking some time off to relax and think about her next project. Whatever she's doing, I'm sure she'll be back in the spotlight soon.

The U.S.-Soviet Space Flight
By Jules Bergman
ABC News Science Editor

The Soviets have trained at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston, Texas, 25 miles east of Houston, and at the State Space Center of the U.S.S.R. near Moscow.

The AASF agreement was signed during the Second Summit, when the world watched the Russian craft orbiting the Earth. The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to create a new scientific association for Russian and American scientists.

The space station will be orbiting the Earth at 12,000 miles per hour. It will be used to conduct research on a variety of scientific problems.

A look Behind

What's in It for Us
What's in It for Russia
What's in It for Man's Future in Space

I was early on, 1958, that NASA's chief scientist, Dr. Robert Goddard, announced a project to develop an atomic rocket for space travel. Since then, Soviet scientists have been working on similar projects, and they have made significant progress.

The U.S. and the Soviet Union have agreed to create a new scientific association for Russian and American scientists. This agreement is the result of many years of negotiation and cooperation between the two nations.

I Call It Giving Up"

"One of the major things holding back progress today is the cynicism that has taken hold of people. We have to stop being so cynical, because that doesn't get us anywhere. It has become fashionable to be cynical, but that's really a holding action against change. It doesn't do anything but paralyze people. I think there is a reason for this tendency. People see what is happening all around them and feel that they don't matter. They feel worthless and even stop looking for good things within themselves. So being cynical becomes a defense and a justification for not doing anything. It is much harder to have hope and act to bring them about. When you are cynical you are just giving up. You might as well be dead. For our survival and progress we have to drop such barriers and expand our efforts toward change. That's the only way we will have a purpose in living." The Doctor Lets You In
New Family of Wonder Drugs

There is a new family of drugs, called prostaglandins (PG's), that is astounding scientists. PG's are normally found in body tissues in minute amounts—there are different PG variants in different tissues. The body makes them from essential unsaturated fatty acids (phenolic acid, linoleic acid, etc.) taken in the diet. Originally, PG's were separated from human and sheep seminal fluid. More recently they have been found in a marine coral. They're also produced by chemical synthesis.
PG's also have opposing roles. Some dilate the bronchial tubes—useful in treating asthma; others constrict bronchial tubes and may cause an asthmatic attack. The only PG presently authorized for use in the U.S. by the FDA is one that is being used to hasten labor and also to terminate pregnancy. But other PG's are being used experimentally to increase blood flow in the lungs; to lower blood pressure; to stimulate the adrenal glands to produce natural cortisone or stimulate the thyroid to increase thyroid hormones. Other PG's can inhibit secretion of acid stomach juice useful in treating stomach ulcer.

Eventually they may be used for migraine or even as contraceptive agents. Within ten years, perhaps sooner, PG's could revolutionize medical treatment.—By Erwin O. DiCyan, Ph.D.

The Diet Watch
What Is "Image Eating"?

"Image eating" is a new dieting trick that's taking hold among TV celebrities. In image eating, a doctor asks his overweight patient to imagine herself in a bikini. While she's still shuddering, he asks her to imagine eating a slimming meal: cottage cheese salad with fruit, for instance—tasty enough, yet not the kind of meal that can slim her down. Then he asks her to see herself wearing a whole new wardrobe two sizes taller than her present. In technical terms, this is called covert conditioning: You're repelled by the "old" fat you, and you identify slim, two-sizes-smaller you with the tasty enough meal.
Many researchers say that deliberate associating before lunch and dinner and projecting these images is ideal. You flinch from the "old" you, and you identify the "new" you with the lower-calorie meal. Gradually, you achieve a new eating pattern: Some good low-calorie lunches, to practice with image eating: shrimp salad with lemon; hard-boiled eggs with paprika, on lettuce; broiled fish with parsley and lemon, green salad.—By Harriet LaBarre

People and You
Do Good Looks Affect How People Judge You?

If you’re good-looking, does that mean that you are also good, kind, honest and sincere? Ask that of people and they'll probably laugh at you. "Of course not," they'll say. But strangely, what we say doesn't match what we do. Most people are susceptible to good looks. When three psychologists conducted experiments on people's reactions, they discovered a strong tendency to assume that good-looking people are good people. In the experiments, volunteers were given photographs of attractive, average and below-average men and women. They were asked to judge how kind, generous, serious, stable, interesting, sincere, sexually warm, outgoing, sociable, etc., each of the people was. In another test, they were asked to judge their friendliness, enthusiasm, social poise and trustworthiness. In all cases, people forgot about beauty being skin deep and decided that good looks probably meant good personality and good character.—By Shirley Sloan Fader

Jobmanship
What It Takes to Succeed as a Secretary

Many people become secretaries. Some are happy and successful in their work, while others who are just as intelligent are restless and dissatisfied. Why? The Johnson O'Connor Research Foundation, a nonprofit group that has tested half a million people for job aptitudes since 1922, says it's not just a matter of "making up your mind to succeed," it's also a matter of your natural abilities and your basic personality. A good secretary needs clerical ability, a natural ease in dealing with paper work, figures and symbols, as well as high finger dexterity. Without the clerical ability she/he makes mistakes, falls behind, daydreams, is just plain unhappy. Without finger dexterity, a secretary never masters the skills well enough to enjoy the work. Moreover, clerical and private secretaries need two different personalities. To spend hours typing, doing accounts, running machines or other clerical work, a clerical worker needs a "subjective" personality that makes them enjoy concentrating on the task at hand rather than working with people. A private secretary needs to enjoy dealing with people. A Secretary also needs inductive reasoning talent—the ability to form a logical conclusion from scattered facts. The qualities that interfere with being a good secretary are: high creativity, a talent for thinking in the third dimension, the ability to think ahead and foresee situations, plus a strong inner drive to succeed.—By S. “DC” MEDICHE:
The Peanut Who Puts Baseball Second

When pitcher George “DC” Medich of the New York Yankees goes on the road with his team, he doesn’t take along playing cards. Instead, he takes the hours that he isn’t in the ball park playing over medical journals. Medich is a fourth-year medical student who expects to become his second major league player in history to become a doctor. The first was another Yankee, outfielder Robin Roberts, who is now an executive in Port Worth.

Bruce Hurley

In 1969 and 1970, Medich was on the mound for the second season with New York, when he registered one of the most-scarred seasons in the American League.

A native of Allentown, Pa., he played both football and baseball at the University of Pittsburgh. He joined the Yankee organization in 1968 and had a good showing in 1969 in the minors. During that year, he was a key man in the team’s championship season.

Medich, who weighs 215 pounds, is one of the tallest and strongest pitchers in baseball.

Medical doctors have given him such a severe discipline that he seems completely untroubled even during the severe moments of a game. “I get fired up, all right, but I keep my feelings to myself and never let them show,” he says. “But I expect my fastball—but I don’t let him in his future profession. He plans to continue his study of medicine and he probably will do a great deal of research in the field of medicine. He says, “I’m a good diagnostician, but I want to be more than that.”

“St” and “S” are used to give the name of the pitcher. Donna Christian is the team’s top pitcher. She is married to a baseball player, and her sister, Donna Christian, is married to a major league player, who is known to be a good diagnostician.

We could all use less friction.

Friction? Who needs it? Friction leads to wear and tear. STP Oil Treatment does something about friction by helping to protect your engine from it. Just add a can to the crankcase when the oil is changed, and the first time it’s down.

That’ll help the oil lubricate better than it would without STP. And a well-lubricated motor is the best way to help reduce oil consumption, bearing wear and prolonging engine life.

Try a can of STP Oil Treatment. See how driving’s like when everything’s running smoothly.

It helps your oil do a better job.
