U.S. Doesn't Bar Using Bomb First

The Los Angeles Times News Service
WASHINGTON — U.S. officials have said that they have no plans to bar the use of nuclear weapons against targets in the Soviet Union. However, the officials have expressed concern about the possibility of a first use of nuclear weapons against targets in the Soviet Union, which has raised concern among some policy makers.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said the United States will not seek new nuclear weapons if it can avoid using any. Kissinger said the administration was reviewing its nuclear strategy and was considering a new policy that would limit the use of nuclear weapons.

Kissinger said the administration was considering a policy that would limit the use of nuclear weapons, but that it was not ready to announce any changes. The administration was also considering the possibility of a first strike against the Soviet Union.

Whale Killers

A deadly harpoon was used to kill a total of 80 whales in the north Atlantic Ocean. The harpoon was fired by a whaling ship, which was operating in the Arctic Ocean off the coast of Alaska.

Co-Op Aware Gifts Illegal

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — The San Antonio Co-op, a local cooperative, has been warned by the state Attorney General to stop making illegal gifts to customers. The Attorney General said the cooperative was violating state law by giving gifts to customers.

Many police departments across the country have been criticized for giving gifts to customers, and some have been forced to make changes to their policies.
