Pezprizes Stamps All: Cash Added

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Ford Thursday ordered that the government's top weapons project, the Strategic Defense Initiative, be halted immediately. The move came after months of uncertainty about the future of the program.

Ford's announcement was immediate and effective, a statement said. The president said the program's high costs could not be justified in light of other national priorities.

Ford also ordered the Pentagon to begin a review of all U.S. defense programs. He said the government must be prepared to respond quickly to any threat.

The president's decision was based on a recommendation from the National Security Council, which met Wednesday.

Ford also noted that the program's development has been hampered by technical problems, delays and cost overruns.

Ford's decision was met with mixed reactions. Some military leaders said the program was essential to ensure peace, while others welcomed the move as a sign of responsible leadership.
