1975 PAGEANT OF HOMES

PENN SOUTH IV JULY 13 thru 20
Pageant Homes Open

Six Oklahoma City area builders have unveiled a pageant of homes, which open today, offering a broad selection of contemporary and traditional styles in a wide range of prices. Located in Penn South IV at SW 93 and Penn South I near SW 89, both builders have prepared in keeping with the theme some model homes that cover all styles and price ranges.

"This is the first year we've ever developed a pageant," said Pageant Homes' sales manager. "The purpose is to introduce our new line of homes to the public. We've developed more than 2,000 homes in this area, and we feel we've developed a good reputation for building quality homes." Pageant Homes has been in the business for 25 years.

Colonial, Spanish, traditional and contemporary style homes will be on display with representatives on hand to answer questions and assist visitors.

Pageant Homes is represented at its first home in Penn South I.

Early buyers express their appreciation for the new homes. "It's really nice, isn't it?" noted Olens.

Other builders displaying homes are Charles More Jr., Verdea Gall Causley Company, Larson Ford Contractors, C. C. and Brewer Homes, Jack Sliger Contractors, and Janey Construction.

Fireplaces Add Value

Fireplaces add more than warmth to today's homes. Builders in the greater Oklahoma City area have displayed a wide range of imagination and creativity in their designs of fireplaces, according to Rusty Waltrip, editor of the Oklahoma Journal.

During the cold weeks, prospective home buyers should take advantage of the opportunity to see fireplaces up close. Some designs are very simple, yet very effective. Full-length mantels, unusual hearth arrangements and functional space offer the homeowner a wide range of opportunities for his own interior decoration ideas.

Whatever the style of fireplace, fireplaces add considerably to the home's value not only in terms of comfort but also at resale time.

Fireplaces are a feature that can be acted on during the winter months, and theOKLAHOMA JOURNAL SUNDAY, JULY 15, 1979

Wait For Interest Rate Drop Will Cost

Home buyers who have taken the wait-and-see attitude in hopes that interest rates will drop still further and find that at the end of the year they'll be better off will have to spend more money than they expected for the house they want to buy.

"Don't wait," says Wayne Boyd, chairman of the real estate board in Oklahoma City. "Interest rates have been rising steadily for several months, and the house is what you want to buy. If interest rates continue to go up, you'll end up paying more than you thought you would." Boyd estimates that if interest rates continue to rise, the buyer who wants to buy a house in Oklahoma City will have to pay about $16,000 more than he thought he would. If the buyer waits, he may find that the price increases for his home will be only slightly below that rate.

Another factor that will increase the cost of the home is the potential for a decline in interest rates. If interest rates do drop, the buyer will have to pay more for the home than he thought he would. The buyer who waited may find that the price of the home is higher than he thought it would be. The buyer who waits may also find that the price of the home is higher than he thought it would be.

And, if the buyer were to purchase earlier, the buyer could have claimed the home as an income tax deduction. The result is that the buyer would have realized a larger appreciation in the value of the home.

Finally, in waiting for the interest rate to fall, the buyer is also losing the time that could be spent on other activities. The buyer who waits may also be losing the time that could be spent on other activities.

The average cost of the buyer's waiting another year for a 1 percent interest rate drop would be about $13,000.

Houses Fight Inflation Rise

Probably the best hedge against inflation has proved to be home ownership. In the last year alone, the average house in a good neighborhood has increased in value about 10 percent.

And, although property taxes are increasing, they are increasing at a rate of about 3 percent, making home ownership even more attractive.

The question many people have, especially young families, is whether to buy a new home or wait for what they hope will be lower prices and interest rates.

Most experts agree that a slight increase in interest rates will not affect the decision. Even if interest rates were to rise, the value of the home would likely increase more than the increase in mortgage payments.

The old rule of thumb says that 2½ times your income is the amount you can afford to spend on a house. But inflation has been outpacing interest rates by a wide margin in recent years. So the cost of living has increased, and your total income will have to increase as well.

If you already own a home, you are probably more aware that the cost of maintenance and improvements has risen. But rising home costs can be offset by rising income and lower mortgage rates.

When buying a home, consider the other factors that will influence the cost of living in your area. Think of the factors that will influence the overall cost of living in the near future.

Prospective home buyers should be aware of these considerations.
