A recently published book by an Oklahoma City lawyer has been put under a cloud by new information that surfaced during a speech at the American Bar Association's annual meeting in St. Louis last week.

The book, "The Law," was written by a former state Sen. Fred W. Maloney, who is now a lawyer in Oklahoma City. The book was based on the author's experiences as a district attorney and as a state senator.

In the book, Maloney outlines his views on the criminal justice system and on the role of the lawyer in society.

"The book is not a legal treatise," Maloney said in an interview. "It's a personal view of the law's role in society."

Maloney said the book was written as a way of teaching the public about the law and its importance.

The book has been widely read and has been praised by many legal experts.
