President Ford and Polish Communist leader Edward Gubek joined Monday in expressing confidence that the Munich Security Conference opening Monday would contribute to the achievement of peace in Europe.

Ford and Gubek met at the request of the United Nations Security Council, which called for a conference to discuss the situation in Europe.

"The conference is a step forward in the effort to achieve peace in Europe," Ford said.

Gubek said he was confident that the conference would bring about a solution to the crisis in Europe.

"The conference is a step forward in the effort to achieve peace in Europe," Gubek said.

Ford added that the conference would provide an opportunity for the United States and the Soviet Union to find a way to work together to resolve the crisis.
