Hotel Room Locked

Rose Moves Into Lobby

BY STEVE SOFFMAN

When the hotel guests, Steve Gant, the woman who had been a "prisoner of the hotel," moved out of her room in the downtown lobby Monday, the hotel's facade, which had been locked for several days, was opened.

"I'm not going to argue," she said. "I'm not going to fight. I will just leave." She then walked out of the lobby and the hotel, which had been closed due to security concerns.

A hotel security guard said she had been moved to the hotel after an incident last week, when she was caught trying to enter the hotel without paying. She was arrested for trespassing and was given a six-month parole.

"I was told I could not stay," she said. "I was told I had to leave." She then walked out of the hotel and the lobby, where she had been staying for several days.

Questions, No Answers

The State Department's written assurance to Prime Minister Jenin of the Arab League that it would continue to carry out its demanding work in the Middle East is a hopeful sign.

"Finally, not only does it mean that the United States will continue to be involved in the Middle East, but it also signifies a commitment to the peace process," said a State Department official.

"This is a significant step forward in the peace process," said the official. "We believe it demonstrates our commitment to the peace process and to the security of our citizens."
