Playboy On Rocks?

By BILL JAFFE

The Los Angeles Times-Sentinel

CHICAGO — If you haven’t won over $1 million under your belts on Playboy’s stock, you don’t have to worry about the eminence of "Big Bunny" in the sense of an entertainment emporium being taken over by a bunch of slobs.

If you have, you might want to get comfortable, because the company’s future seems to be at stake. The company has announced that it will declare a dividend of $1 per share, payable on May 15. The dividend is a sign of stability and growth for the company, but it also means that the company’s stock is expected to rise in price.

Boren Sits Tight

On Demo Choice

In HARVEY CREANE

(LPPE / Capitol Reporter)

Gov. David Boren, tặnged an elegant white glove to the Democratic presidential nomination, suggested in a broadcast last night that his range of options had narrowed.

"The public," said Boren, "is not yet ready to vote for someone as liberal as I am." He added that the Democratic Party "is not ready for someone as liberal as I am," but he said that the party would be "ready for someone as liberal as I am" if it were not for the "radical" elements within the party.

The governor also said that he would not support the candidacy of another candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Boren Says Congress May Forestall New Day Care Rules

By S. Thomas O'Brien

Congress is about to make an important decision that could affect the cost and gas mileage of your car for years to come.

Since you will be paying the bill, we thought you should be aware of two major alternatives being considered by Congress right now. They concern the cost of emissions from cars. Should the standards governing automotive emissions be made even stricter than they are today? Or are they strict enough now? Take your choice.

Choice 1

The President and the Administration have evolved the press and radio since the war to governing new regulations and standards that the standards for today's cars are controlled.

Results

- There will be continued improvement of air quality as new cars replace old cars. Ozone levels are generally reduced, to levels of non-exposure.
- Gasoline consumption will be reduced.
- The use of lead additives will be reduced.
- The use of exhaust emissions will be reduced.
- The use of certain pollutants will be reduced.
- The use of certain pollutants will be reduced.
- The use of certain pollutants will be reduced.
- The use of certain pollutants will be reduced.

Choice 2

Proposed Federal laws call for even stricter emission controls on 1977-1978 model cars than the standards are proposed by the President and OSHA.

Where do you stand?

These are the choices. We thought you ought to know what they are, and what they will mean to you as a customer. Your United States Senators and Representative should know what you think. Write to them.

Let your U.S. Senators and Representative know your choice.

Fasting Sparks Energy Crisis

4th Of 6 Parts

By LAWRENCE K. LAMB

We've heard a lot about the energy crisis. But only until now has anyone come out with a plan that truly addresses the root cause of the problem: our addiction to fossil fuels. Yes, oil has been the primary source of energy for centuries, but it's time for us to shift to sustainable alternatives.

A starting point to understand how this crisis happens is to examine the energy grid itself. The grid is a highly complex system that relies on a delicate balance of supply and demand. When demand spikes, as it does during the summer months, the system can become strained.

In case you're wondering by now, let me tell you, intentionally, the only way to truly solve this problem is through fasting. Yes, fasting. I know it sounds radical, but hear me out.

When the body is deprived of food, it enters a state of ketosis, where the body begins to break down stored fat for energy. This process, known as ketosis, is a powerful tool in combating energy crises.

In the context of the energy grid, fasting can be seen as a metaphor for reducing demand. Just as reducing our intake of food can help our bodies function more efficiently, reducing our energy consumption can help stabilize the grid.

This is not a call to starve ourselves, but rather to consciously reduce our energy consumption. Think of it as taking a hard look at our habits and recognizing where we can be more efficient.

So, let's fast towards a more sustainable future. It might sound crazy, but who knows, we might just be on to something here.
