Parole Board Basts Boren For Criticizing Decisions

By C. J. SMITH
The Oklahoma Journal

The Oklahoma Parole Board has voted to revoke the parole of former Governor Frank Boren.

The board said Boren has failed to cooperate with parole officers and has engaged in criminal activity.

"We have determined that Boren is not suitable for parole," said John Green, the board's spokesperson.

Boren, a former governor of Oklahoma, was convicted of bribery and racketeering in 1982 and was released from prison in 1985.

Boren has repeatedly criticized the parole system, claiming that parolees are not being adequately supervised.

"We believe Boren has not made a sincere effort to comply with the terms of his parole," Green said.

Boren has 30 days to appeal the parole board's decision.

John Boren is the son of former Governor George N. Boren.

Flooding Results In 6 Deaths

The Oklahoma Journal

Several deaths were reported in a severe flooding event in Oklahoma this week.

A total of six people have died, including a family of four who were swept away by floodwaters in Creek County.

"Our hearts go out to the families of those who have lost loved ones," said Governor Mary Fallin.

Fallin said the state has activated the National Guard to assist with flood relief efforts.

"We are doing everything we can to help those affected by this flooding," Fallin said.

The flooding occurred in southwest Oklahoma, near the town of El Reno.

Mayor Don Proctor declared a state of emergency in El Reno, and the National Guard has been sent to help with the response.

"We are working closely with our federal partners to ensure that we have the resources we need," Proctor said.

The death toll is expected to rise as rescue efforts continue.

Weather conditions are expected to improve later this week, although the risk of flash flooding remains.

Security

U.S. officials said today the government will increase security at the American Embassy in Tokyo in the wake of the recent terrorist attacks in the Philippines.

Allegations of Japanese complicity in the attacks have fueled anti-Japanese sentiment in the region, and the U.S. has been urged to take additional security measures at its diplomatic missions.

A spokesman for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs said the embassy would be reinforced with additional security personnel and equipment.

"We are taking this action in response to the threat posed by the recent attacks," the spokesman said. "The safety of our citizens is our top priority, and we will do everything in our power to protect them.

The increased security measures come as Japan and the United States work to strengthen their relationship and ensure stability in the region.

Soviets Mob Astronauts

The Soviet Union has mobilized thousands of citizens to demonstrate their support for the space program. This comes after the recent failure of a spacecraft launch, which raised questions about the country's technological capabilities.

Protests have been held in several cities across the country, with people chanting "Long live the space program!" and "We want rockets!"

"We are deeply disturbed by the recent failure," said a government spokesperson. "We need to demonstrate to the world that the Soviet Union is a leading power in space exploration.

The demonstrations have not gone unchallenged, with authorities using tear gas and batons to disperse the crowds. However, the protests have remained largely peaceful, with many people carrying signs and banners.

"We are determined to keep mobilizing," said one protestor. "We will not give up until we see rockets in space again."

Attorney To Request
Transfer For Patty

Patty Hopkins, a terminally ill woman, has requested a transfer to a medical facility in the United States.

"I want to be near my family," said Hopkins, who is currently being treated in a hospital in Canada.

Her attorney is preparing a petition to transfer her to a hospital in the U.S. where she can receive experimental treatments.

"We are fighting on two fronts," said her attorney. "First, to get her transferred, and then to ensure she receives the care she needs.

The petition is expected to be filed within the next few days, and a decision is expected within a matter of weeks."

Cowboys Not Only Ones Who Wear Western Hats

By Prozent H. C. THOMAS
The Los Angeles Times

HISTORY - The cowboy hat, perhaps more than any hat worn by American westerners, stands as a symbol of the West. It is a hat that is always present, good or evil.
