Civil Rights, Defense Stands 'Liberal'

Bellmon Bucks Conservative Stereotype

By SPENCER SUN
The Oklahoma Journal

The Miami Herald newspaper recently ran an article about a man named Bellmon who was a conservative activist. The article highlighted his efforts to promote conservative ideas and his opposition to certain liberal policies.

Bellmon was a fierce advocate for conservative causes and was known for his fiery speeches and debates. He was particularly vocal in his opposition to what he viewed as dangerous liberal policies that threatened American values.

Despite the challenges, Bellmon remained committed to his causes and continued to speak out against what he perceived as a liberal agenda that was eroding the foundations of American society.

His dedication and passion for conservative principles inspired many, and his work helped to shape the political landscape of the time.

The article concluded by acknowledging Bellmon's significant impact and emphasizing his perseverance in the face of adversity.

Has Life Imitated Lampoon?

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The New York Times has published an article on the influence of Lampoon, the humor magazine co-founded by Larry David and the late Gilda Radner, on modern comedy. The article highlights how Lampoon's irreverent and satirical style has shaped the landscape of comedy and television, influencing everything from late-night talk shows toakra series. The article also discusses how Lampoon's approach to humor has been adopted by other institutions and individuals, such as the Country Music Association, which recently announced a new award category for 'Best Lampoonery' in recognition of the genre's impact on the music industry.

OG&E'S building for the future that looks electric.

OG&E could save a lot of money by using natural gas or coal fired power plants to generate electricity. But the cost of doing so is standing idle in a few years because of a shortage of fuel. Instead, we're building coal-fired power plants to help assure there will be an adequate supply of electricity to meet your future needs.
