$50 Million Spent
On Angola Arms

The Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON—The American administration in the Majeket arm war has not only sold armament to the South African regime in the Hope of a quick settlement but also to the transfer of the arms to Angola, according to top officials. The arms, it is said, are to be used in the current military operations.

The sale of arms to Angola is a direct violation of the arms embargo imposed by the United Nations.

The arms were transferred to Angola by flight of ministerial aircraft. The details of the transfer were not available at the time of writing.
