Carter Seeks SALT Action Delay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will ask the Senate to approve the SALT II treaty today, breaking the long standoff on the issue. The Senate is expected to vote on the treaty today, and the House is expected to vote on it next week.

The Senate vote is expected to be close, with the treaty needing 67 votes to pass. The House vote is expected to be easier, with the treaty expected to pass by a comfortable margin.

Carter has been pushing for a resolution of the SALT II dispute for months, and has repeatedly said that the treaty is essential for national security.

But some senators are opposing the treaty, citing concerns about its impact on U.S. military preparedness and the possibility of a future arms race.

Carter has said that he will not seek re-election if the Senate approves the treaty.

Price Of Mexico's Oil Soars

Mexico's oil exports have risen sharply in recent months, fueling inflation and putting pressure on the peso.

Despite efforts to stabilize the economy, the peso has lost value against the dollar, raising concerns about the country's ability to pay its foreign debts.

The government has been trying to control inflation by raising interest rates and restricting the money supply, but the measures have not been effective.

The central bank has been selling dollars in the foreign exchange market, but the peso has continued to slide.

Title Fee Loss Socks County

A state audit has revealed that the county has lost millions of dollars in fees due to fraud.

The audit found that county clerks had been pocketing fees, including those for marriage licenses and court fees.

The county has been trying to recoup the lost money, but has so far been unsuccessful.

The auditor has called for the county to implement stronger controls to prevent future fraud.

Delay In SALT Action Sought

Vice President Walter Mondale, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said recently that the United States was not likely to negotiate with the Soviets to limit strategic weapons. The State Department spokesman said the United States would not participate in a new round of SALT negotiations until the administration of President Jimmy Carter had been established. This was in response to a request by several senators to start SALT negotiations.

GROCING THIS WEEK

Savvy Shopping

The key to saving money is to plan ahead. Make a list of the foods you need and stick to it. Avoid buying things you don’t need. Use coupons and sales to get the best deals. Store food in the right way to keep it fresh. Refrigerate perishables and freeze non-perishables. Be creative with leftovers. Make soups, stews, and casseroles with leftovers. Use stale bread for croutons or french toast. Don’t throw out food; use it to make something new. Remember, the more you plan, the more you save. Enjoy shopping and saving!
