"Kramer Vs. Kramer"

Los Angeles — By the time I first wrote the movie review for the film 'Kramer Vs. Kramer,' the films had been released and the decision had already been made: the movie had likely given Jack Lemmon what he considered the most meaningful of all the awards — the pinnacle of his career as an actor. The decision was made without my knowledge, but I now realize how much of an influence my review had on the decision-making process. In the film, Jack Lemmon plays a middle-aged man who suddenly becomes a single father of a 3-year-old daughter. The film is about how the two of them must learn to communicate and support each other as they adjust to their new situation. The drama is compelling, the acting is superb, and the movie is a rare look at the often overlooked world of single parenting.

Semi-closed

Washington, D.C. — Congress has finally closed the $3.5 billion budget gap for the government. The gap was caused by the nation's accumulated debt and the economic downturn. The government has been forced to cut programs and services, and many people are suffering as a result. It is time for Congress to act and come up with a plan to address the gap and help those in need.

Animals Can Talk

I've just stumbled upon some of the most incredible animal language studies ever conducted. Researchers have discovered that animals can communicate with each other, using a range of sounds, gestures, and even facial expressions. This is a groundbreaking discovery that could revolutionize our understanding of animal behavior.

Question: One of the most difficult people I have ever met is a neighbor. He is always loud and rude. How can I deal with him?

Answer: I can see why you might find your neighbor difficult to deal with. However, it's important to remember that we all have different ways of communicating and behaving. What works for one person might not work for another. It's important to try to understand where he is coming from and see if there is a way to approach the situation in a more positive way. Maybe you can talk to him about your feelings and try to work out a solution together. Sometimes, it's helpful to find a common ground and work towards a mutual understanding.

Doctors Pull Plug On 'Brain Dead' Baby

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) Doctors Friday disconnected a life-support machine that kept 2-month-old Michael Snavely breathing since a severe accident left him brain dead. The family immediately flew to Kansas City, Mo., to set up a trust fund to help cover the costs of caring for the baby and for his parents, who are allegedly administered by answervter with the family committee and "brain dead." The action ended the prospect of a miracle, said a family spokesperson.

"Our case was not unlike the case of a heart attack patient who had appeared to be dead and whose heart unexpectedly began to beat again," the spokesperson said.

"I fear there is no precedent for legal support in such a case," the spokesperson added.

A state law barring babies from being declared dead is expected to be adopted by the legislature next month.

O'HAIR To Court

ASHTON, Tex. (UPI) Mrs. O'Hair said Friday his wife, Margaret, 26, was in a normal state of health and that the couple had not had a legal separation.

"I want to sort out the legalities of the situation," the spokesperson said.

Mrs. O'Hair confirmed that the child could not be placed in her care because of a "state law," but added that the couple was planning to adopt the child.

"The child is not dead, but the state law bars us from adopting it," the spokesperson explained.

O'Hair also said he had consulted with a lawyer and had received legal advice that the child could not be placed in his care.

"I don't understand the law," the spokesperson said.

"I don't know how it applies to our situation," the spokesperson added.

"We are trying to sort out the legalities of the situation," the spokesperson said.

"We are not seeking to change the law," the spokesperson added.

"We are just trying to sort out the legalities of the situation," the spokesperson said.
