Soviets Clog Afghan Ports With Arms Aid

By United Press International

The United States is reporting that the Soviets have begun clogging the Afghan ports with arms aid. This development is significant because it indicates that the Soviets are using their influence over Afghanistan to impede the flow of goods into that country.

The reports suggest that the Soviets are using their control over the Afghan ports to prevent the sale of weapons and other goods to other countries. This is a clear violation of international law and a violation of the United States' efforts to keep weapons out of the hands of terrorists and other groups.

The United States is considering采取措施 to address this issue. The State Department has been working with the Afghan government to improve the security of the ports and to prevent the flow of weapons.

GALVESTON, Tex.—The last answer about the controversial 'Fats' was given by Dr. Charles E. Price, Dr. Price, who wrote the Fats report, was here today to make his statement:

"We have spent some $2,000 on this subject, in trying to find the answer. Our research shows that the Fats theory is just that—wrong.

The study of nutrition has led to the conclusion that fats cause heart disease, cancer, and other ailments. The evidence is overwhelming.

Dr. Price, a well-known physician, said: "We have found that fat is the enemy of health. It causes heart disease, cancer, and other ailments."

Doctrines And Detente

As Nixon's policy of detente has been in effect, the world has undergone a reassessment of its strategic relationships. The policies of the United States have been shaped by the need for a balance of power, with a focus on maintaining a strong military presence in Europe and Asia. The U.S. has also sought to strengthen its alliances, including with Japan and South Korea. However, the policy of detente has also led to increased tensions with the Soviet Union, particularly over issues such as arms control and the spread of nuclear weapons. The future of the policy remains uncertain, as it is shaped by the ongoing Cold War and the need for a balance of power.
