President Reinstates Draft Registration, Says U.S. Will Defend The Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Carter said Wednesday that the U.S. would increase its forces in the Persian Gulf to defend the region against any attack and that he would re-establish draft registration, an event believed to be related to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The president, speaking to a Washington audience, said the U.S. would send more troops to the region and increase its military presence. He also announced that draft registration would be reinstated.

Carter's comments came amid growing tensions between the U.S. and Iran, with both countries accusing each other of provocation.

The reinstatement of draft registration is seen as a significant move by the U.S., as it will allow the government to call up more troops if necessary.

In his speech, Carter said the U.S. was committed to defending the Persian Gulf and would continue to increase its military presence in the region.

The U.S. has been increasing its military presence in the region in recent months, in response to what it sees as growing threats from Iran and other countries.

The president also spoke about the situation in Afghanistan, saying the U.S. would continue to support the Afghan government and its allies in their fight against terrorism.

In other news, the U.S. and China have reached an agreement on trade relations, with both countries agreeing to reduce tariffs and increase market access.

The agreement is seen as a positive step towards improving economic relations between the two countries, which have been strained in recent years due to various trade disputes.

The matter was discussed during a recent meeting between U.S. and Chinese officials.

In the meantime, the U.S. and its allies are continuing to monitor the situation in the Middle East, with tensions remaining high.

President Carter's speech and the reinstatement of draft registration are expected to have a significant impact on the region, as they are seen as signs of a strong commitment to defending the Persian Gulf and its interests.

Reagan Gets a Big Boost From Home

By United Press

President Reagan got a big boost Friday when his campaign staff and some key contributors met with Grover Norquist, a prominent conservative activist.

The meeting was arranged by John MacAloon, a veteran Republican operative who is now working for the campaign.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss strategies for reaching out to key constituencies and to coordinate efforts with other Republican candidates.

The attendees included Reagan's campaign manager, Kellyanne Conway, and several major donors.

The meeting lasted about an hour and was held at a Washington, D.C., hotel.

Meanwhile, the campaign is stepping up its efforts in key battleground states to make sure that Republican voters turn out on Election Day.

Nunley Says He Only Planned To Rob Man

By Bruce Haggard

Nunley, 24, was arrested last week for allegedly attempting to rob a woman in a park.
