Dick West - But Looke Twice Ere Ye Lepe

WASHINGTON, D.C. - For years, the Foreign Relations Committee has been a bastion of relative independence. It's been a place where members can examine foreign policy issues without the constraints of party politics. But now, with the introduction of a new senator from Colorado, the committee's traditional independence is in question.

Dick West's poll shows that Americans are concerned about the growing foreign policy issues. But many believe that the committee's ability to maintain its independence is compromised.

Even those who support the new senator argue that the committee's independence should not be compromised.

The committee is currently under the leadership of Senator Bob Dole, a Republican from Kansas. Dole has been a long-time member of the committee and is known for his independence.

The committee's independence is crucial. It's the only place where members can truly examine foreign policy issues without the constraints of party politics.

As a result, we must ensure that the committee's independence is protected. Only then can we truly have a voice in foreign policy issues.

Soviet Plan Cuban Maneuvers

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The Soviet Union is planning a military operation to take over Cuba. The plan involves sending in troops and cutting off the country from the world.

The operation is expected to be a major test of the Soviet Union's military capabilities. It's also expected to be a major blow to the United States.

The United States has been warning about the plan for months.

Dole has been a strong supporter of the committee's independence. He's a Republican from Kansas and is known for his independence.

As a result, we must ensure that the committee's independence is protected. Only then can we truly have a voice in foreign policy issues.

Nigh Backs Sales Tax Reduction

WASHINGTON, D.C. - George Nigh, the governor of Oklahoma, has been pushing for a sales tax reduction. The governor has been a strong supporter of the committee's independence. He's a Republican from Oklahoma and is known for his independence.

As a result, we must ensure that the committee's independence is protected. Only then can we truly have a voice in foreign policy issues.

Striking Firefighters Disciplined, Salary Depletes Deputies

Oklahoma City — The city began proposing a number of reforms to the city's police and fire department unions on Tuesday, citing the financial pressure of a declining tax base and a deflationary market for new hires.

The city of Oklahoma City, in a statement released Tuesday, said it was working with the Oklahoma City Fire Department and the Oklahoma City Police Department to explore potential reforms to their collective bargaining agreements. The city said the reforms would be aimed at reducing the cost of labor and improving the efficiency of the departments.
