Soviets Bombard Afghan With Deadly Nerve Gases

By United Press International

Soviet warplanes bombarded an area in northeastern Afghanistan with deadly nerve gas in a major push against guerrillas who beat Soviet forces yesterday. Afghan sources said that Afghan soldiers may have wiped out "entire families.

A Swedish diplomat, quoted in a Radio London newswire, said that hundreds of Afghan soldiers have been "wiped out, entire families may have been wiped out.

In Kabul, Radio Pakistan said the gas attack on Khost was near the Soviet border, and that Washington was investigating and it said true it would be ICRC dehumidifier. The official Afghan Radio Hamid said the incident "death of 15 soldiers was the beginning of the end of the war."

Career In Jeopardy

U.S. Senator Barry Goldwater and other Republican leaders are currently the subject of considerable concern among President Nixon's aids. There are fears that these leaders may not support Nixon in the upcoming election. Nixon himself has expressed doubts about their loyalty, stating that he will not rely on them until after the primaries are over. The situation is made more complex by the fact that Nixon's own campaign is facing serious financial difficulties, which could further strain his relationship with these leaders. If the Republicans fail to nominate Nixon, or if Nixon is denied the nomination, he may have to choose between fighting his party or joining forces with it. The outcome of this situation will have a significant impact on the future of American politics.

Other Editors Say

Death Ray

There are several reasons why the editor of The Journal, who has been critical of the government's policies, has decided to end his column. His editorship has been troubled by a series of controversies, including accusations of plagiarism and theft of intellectual property. The editor, who had previously been praised for his work, has now been forced to resign. The column will continue to be published until a new editor is appointed. The Journal's management has promised to conduct a thorough investigation into the allegations and to take appropriate action.

Nuclear Folly

When Edward Teller, the father of the hydrogen bomb, visited the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, he expressed his views on the possibility of building a nuclear weapon in the Middle East. He said: "I believe that a nuclear weapon would be an effective means of preserving peace in the region". This statement has been met with controversy, with some arguing that it would only lead to an arms race and increase the risk of nuclear war. Others have praised Teller's wisdom, noting that he has been a vocal opponent of nuclear proliferation for many years. The Journal will continue to report on this issue, as well as other major international news.

Chavez UFW Dictator

There are many who argue that the United Farm Workers (UFW) chairman, Cesar Chavez, is a Dictator. Chavez has been the leader of the UFW for many years, and has been involved in many controversial labor disputes. His supporters argue that he is a powerful leader who fights for workers' rights, while his critics accuse him of controlling the union and suppressing opposition. The Journal will continue to report on this issue, as well as other major international news.

Removing Labels Sometimes Toughest Part Of Refund

By Matt Slade

Cashiers and sales clerks complain that the toughest part of returning goods is convincing the consumer to do it. The store cannot return the wrong item to the manufacturer, so the return must be done by the consumer. A survey of supermarket shoppers shows that the average consumer returns only 10% of his purchases. This is because the consumer is not willing to take the time and energy to return the items. The store cannot force the consumer to return the items, so the store must convince the consumer to do it.

Six New Pilots Open Spring Training

Threat Of Strike Looms Over All

By National Press International

Six former major league pilots from three different ball clubs opened spring training for the San Francisco Giants in Phoenix, Ariz., yesterday, and threatened to walk out if the National League owners refused to negotiate a new collective bargaining agreement. The six pilots, who include Joe Altobelli, manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, and Vic Davalillo, manager of the San Diego Padres, said they would consider the owners' refusal to negotiate a new agreement as an act of bad faith.

The National League owners, who met in Milwaukee last week, rejected the union's proposal to extend the current agreement for one year, which expires March 1, 1965. The owners also rejected the union's proposal for a $10,000 minimum salary for pilots.

The pilots, who are demanding a $10,000 minimum salary, said they would consider the owners' refusal to negotiate a new agreement as an act of bad faith.

NEW YORK (AP) - The Los Angeles Dodgers and Houston Astros made some key acquisitions this week that could help them challenge the San Francisco Giants for the Western Division of the National League.

The Dodgers signed outfielder Rick Monday, who had been with the Chicago Cubs, and catcher Bill Stoneman, who had been with the San Francisco Giants. The Astros signed pitcher Jim Royce, who had been with the Chicago Cubs, and catcher Al Smith, who had been with the San Francisco Giants.

The Dodgers and Astros are currently in a tight race for the Western Division lead, with the Giants in third place.
