Judge Tosses Hostages To Goliath

By Larry Davis

Staff Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY — An Oklahoma County district judge Thursday declared Oklahoma's hostage crisis over and restored normalcy to the state capital.

After six days of tense negotiations, District Attorney Larry Davis and his team decided to allow the hostages to leave voluntarily. The decision was made after a heated meeting between the district attorney and the hostage-takers.

In a press conference, Davis said, "We are allowing the hostages to leave voluntarily because we believe that is the best course of action for everyone involved."

The hostages had been held for six days by a group of armed individuals who demanded to speak with the governor.

Davis also announced that the state will not pursue criminal charges against the hostage-takers.

"We believe that allowing the hostages to leave voluntarily is the best way to resolve this situation," Davis said.

The hostages were safely released without any injuries, and the state's hostage crisis has come to an end.

Tests On Gacy Easy To Fake?

By Michael S. Moore

CHICAGO—Several basic tests that hypothetically would be used to establish the guilt of serial killer John Wayne Gacy were easily simulated by researchers who used them on a human volunteer.

The tests, conducted by Dr. Richard J. Karpinski, assistant professor of psychology and psychiatry at Rush Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center, were designed to replicate the methods used by forensic psychologists to determine whether a suspect is lying or telling the truth.

Dr. Karpinski and his colleagues, who were not involved in the Gacy case, used a volunteer who was not a criminal to simulate the characteristics of a suspect in a murder case.

The volunteer was given a series of questions that were asked in a manner similar to the way they would be asked in the Gacy investigation.

The volunteer was asked to answer the questions in a way that would indicate whether he was lying or telling the truth.

Dr. Karpinski's team then analyzed the volunteer's responses and compared them to those of the Gacy suspect.

Dr. Karpinski said that the volunteer's responses were similar to those of the Gacy suspect, indicating that the tests are not foolproof.

He added that the tests can be used to help determine whether a suspect is lying or telling the truth, but they cannot be used as a sole method of establishing guilt.

The tests were conducted as part of a larger study on the effectiveness of polygraph tests and other methods of determining guilt.

Ex-Candidate Baker Returns to Senate

WASHINGTON (CQ)—Senate Appropriations Subcommitte Chairman Frank Baker, a Republican, has announced that he will run for the Senate seat held by Democratic incumbent Frank Church.

Baker, a former member of the House of Representatives, said he has decided to run because he believes that the Senate is the best place for him to serve.

Baker, who is a native of Idaho, has been a strong supporter of conservative causes and has been outspoken on issues such as defense spending and tax cuts.

He has also been a vocal critic of the Democratic leadership, particularly on issues related to energy and the environment.

Baker's decision comes as the Senate race has become increasingly competitive, with both candidates spending heavily on television advertising.

Patsy Cline: Country Greats

Performing as a duet are country music superstars Loretta Lynn and Patsy Cline (Belevon D’Angelo) in Universal’s “Coal Miner’s Daughter.”

Coal Miner’s Daughter

From the first time he saw her, Maycey was taken with Loretta. She liked him too, but she was shy—very shy, really. Loretta and her family lived in Appalachia. They were extremely poor, and the little schooling she had was because her mother and her mother-in-law didn’t want her to marry a coal miner.

Country.Daughter’s story of Loretta Lynn

Maycey, but a month after they met, they were married. Maycey’s singing voice and Loretta’s guitar were a perfect wedding ring. Marry me, she was the mother of four children.

She found time to sing and write away. Maycey hadet her into making a record and they went on the road to promote it. She had two more children, twins. Encouraged by her husband, Patsy also became more of her own woman. Eventually, with Maycey’s constant support, she made it to superstar.

But that’s only part of the story. “Coal Miner’s Daughter” is a Universal Pictures film about love, life, and the maternal journey of a woman.

It’s a true story based on the book Loretta wrote with George Vecsey. She is the first woman to sign a contract that included a feature film and television series.

Hollywood (UP) Chad Everett, who starred as a drifter in “Medical Center” for 11 seasons, stars as Patsy Cline in Universal’s “Coal Miner’s Daughter.”

Hollywood trade stethoscope for pistol

Everett trades stethoscope for pistol

While playing games and putting one or two bullets per episode, he asked why a network and studio would allow a Dr. Cline to have a stethoscope lying around the floor. The answer is not all that complex. All networks and sponsors are looking for a visual way to attract the audience. So he asked the executive producer if he would allow a character to have a stethoscope, and the answer was yes.

“Coal Miner’s Daughter” is the story of Loretta Lynn, a woman who came from a family of coal miners and became one of the most loved and respected country music stars of all time.

Folks From Butcher Hollow

Starting Out

Loretta Lynn and Mooney Lynn (Sissy Spacek and Tommy Lee Jones) are two poor people from Appalachia who make it to Hollywood. Mooney was a driving force in Loretta’s career.

Robin Trower has reharmonized his size and trimmed his head back to the skin level, a move which, while not necessarily pleasing eye, will no doubt increase the volume and the use of the upper register of his voice. The result is a more natural-sounding voice that is less likely to be damaged by the upper register. However, the change has affected the overall tone of his singing, making it less resonant and more subdued. This is particularly noticeable in the higher register, where the voice now has a more mellow, softer quality. Overall, the change in Trower's appearance has had a significant impact on his performance, making him appear more comfortable and confident on stage.
Melissa Gilbert, part grow

"I can't wait to see how the story unfolds and to meet all the other characters." Melissa's role in "Little House on the Prairie" will be pivotal in defining her career, and she's already making plans for what comes next.
