Cancer Killer Developed?

By Andrew M. Nicholson

San Francisco (UPI) — A new cancer killer has been developed, according to research published in the journal Cancer Research. The discovery was made by the American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute.

The drug, called Anticancerin, has been tested on mice and has shown promising results in the fight against cancer. It works by targeting cancer cells and inhibiting their growth, leading to a significant decrease in tumor size.

"This is a major breakthrough in the fight against cancer," said Dr. John Smith, lead researcher on the study. "Anticancerin has the potential to revolutionize cancer treatment and save countless lives."

Environmentalists

Water sports long have held a particular interest to children, many of whom have spent hours along the banks of streams or rivers, exploring the secrets of the water. Environmentalists, however, view such activities with concern, fearing that the impact of water sports on the environment may be significant.

At a recent meeting, environmentalists gathered to discuss the potential impact of water sports on the environment. They agreed that more research is needed to understand the effects of water sports on the ecosystem, but they also noted that some activities, such as fly fishing, have a minimal impact on the environment.

Voice Of The People

Uncensored

The recent decision by the city council to limit public speaking at council meetings has sparked a debate among residents.

Billy Graham

I support the council's decision to limit public speaking. It will help prevent the council from being overwhelmed by a few vocal individuals who dominate the discussions.

Don Graff

I disagree with the council's decision. It will limit the input of the public and make the meetings less democratic.

What Price Beauty?

Thousands Of Dollars, Hours Under The Knife

What price can you get "youth" and "beauty" for these days? Several thousand dollars — or at least five to six figures — will buy a new face or a whole new look for many people. Today's operating rooms in New York City and from the American middle class, reports Richard Dowling in April issue of GQ magazine. The pictures, check-in from upper left, illustrate some of the common steps in the process.

Carter Says U.S. 'Impatient'

By Bob Barron

In Washington

154th President Carter, as he tours the campaign, is giving this country a "short tempation." In a speech before the American Medical Association, President Carter said: "I have often been asked by patients whether they're interested in plastic surgery." Carter said: "The answer is yes, and the patients want to talk about the operation, the recovery, and the cost. They want to know how long it will take to have the operation, and what the recovery time will be." Carter said: "The patients are not interested in the operation, the recovery, and the cost. They want to know how long it will take to have the operation, and what the recovery time will be." Carter said: "The patients are not interested in the operation, the recovery, and the cost. That's what Army Reserve units can offer you. A $1,500 educational aid for your college. The Army Reserve is your high school diploma and graduat e quality.

No Ordinary Part-Time Job. The training and experience you get in the Army Reserve is something special. Because it can't be bought or taught. And depending on your qualifications and your part time job. You may be eligible for Medical Technology or one of the many other Army Reserve programs.

START IN HIGH SCHOOL. If you're 17 or older and have other part-time qualifications you can join while you're still in high school. You'll train only 30 hours a week. Usually on a weekend. The rest of your training is programmed during the school year. This is nice for college students.

EARN WHILE YOU LEARN. You can earn up to $90 an hour when you graduate. And over $65 a month.

Meet Today's Army Reserve.
